Violent child deaths soaring

Self-destructive tendencies have resulted in an alarming increase in violence-related deaths among B.C. children, a major study released Monday shows.

The report by Vancouver pediatrician Dr. Roger Tonkin says that while children have unprecedented good health, more are dying by suicide, homicide and accident.

"Violence in childhood in B.C. has been escalating at an alarming rate, and we have the dubious distinction of having one of the highest violence-related mortality rates in the world," says the report.

The study confirms a situation Victoria medical people have been dealing with for some time, Greater Victoria General Hospital director of patient counselling Keith Anderson said today.

Anderson said the hospital's pediatric and child abuse services are dealing with increasing numbers of children in potentially destructive home situations.

Anderson said less and less value is being placed on childrens rights and needs in Victoria and across the province.

"I am aware of individual cases where children are victimized by adults and our culture and in some cases the media," he said, adding that growing numbers of young single mothers with no family support, and the breakup of the nuclear-age family are major reasons for the increasing problem.

"The study struck a responsive chord in me. I don't have lots of statistics to indicate what direction we (society) are going in with children, but I see it every day in my kind of work."

In his study Tonkin found that violence accounted for 55 per cent of deaths for children between the ages of one and 14 and 87 per cent of the deaths in the 15-to-19 age group. The majority occurred outside the hospital — many in the home or family car.

Obesity is increasing, children are not physically fit, more are dropping out of school, the pregnancy rate among teenagers is unacceptably high and there has been a tremendous increase in motor vehicle accidents involving juveniles.

"Children and young people may be the perpetrators of violence, but usually they are the victims," Tonkin says.

In the last decade, the suicide rate increased 59 per cent for children under 15 and 236 per cent for those aged 15 to 19.

Deaths by motor vehicle accidents increased an average 15 per cent for children and teenagers. The human resources ministry reported five B.C. children died of physical abuse last year.

Tonkin says the figures reflect only the tip of the iceberg. For every successful suicide it is estimated there are between 50 and 100 attempts.

For every child who dies of physical abuse, there are between 300 and 400 reports of

Pay up or freeze Lougheed tells oil consumers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed delivered a tough message to oil consumers Monday, telling them bluntly that his government will unilaterally set a price on oil this winter if a pricing agreement cannot be reached.

"Within Alberta, people will pay the world price for oil fairly soon and if other Canadians want to pay the price, they can have some too," he told reporters.

If Alberta does not get the price it wants, he said, the taps would be turned off.

Lougheed's remarks to a Vancouver Board of Trade meeting and to reporters later brought a swift reaction from critics in his own province and elsewhere.

In Ottawa today, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn tried to brush off Lougheed's threat by saying each premier must take his position.

Despite a condemnation of the Alberta stance by the Ontario government, Hnatyshyn denied the provinces are squabbling.

"That's not my interpretation of it. These are statements made by the provincial premiers."

Prime Minister Clark has refused to comment on Lougheed's speech.

The Alberta premier, who has been involved in difficult oil price talks with the other provinces and the federal government this year, said his government will set a price for consumers in his province.

If consumers outside Alberta want to buy oil at that price, they can, he added. Otherwise they can go elsewhere.

At present, Canadian oil — the vast majority of it from Alberta — sells domestically at $13.75 a barrel, compared

Bouey hoping bank rates can fall soon

By CAROL GOAR

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, concluded eight hours of testimony before the commons finance committee Monday evening, expressing optimism than interest rates will soon start falling.

Acknowledging that current high interest rates are imposing considerable hardship on the 'little guy' — the small businessman, farmer or homebuyer — the governor held out the hope that the peak may have been reached.

"When we've reached peak interest rates before, they haven't lasted very long," Bouey said.

He refused to be specific about when rates might begin to fall or how quickly they will tumble.

"I can't tell you how deep the valley is or how promising the promised land on the other side will be," he told New Democrat Simon DeJong (Regina East).

But Bouey did remind MPs that the last time interest rates reached a peak — in July 23, 1974, when the bank rate stood at 9.25 per cent — it took only four months before the bank was able to start reducing its lending rate.

The governor was questioned by 31 MPs from all four parties in his two-day hearing.

Although the grilling at times became intense, the 59-year-old Saskatchewan banker remained cool throughout, answering even the most hostile questions calmly and thoughtfully.

Many MPs, most of them members of the Conservative government, appealed to the governor to think of the suffering his high-interest-rate policy means for their constituents.

Only two members of the government — veteran MPs Pat Nowlan of Nova Scotia and Alvin Hamilton of Saskatchewan — attacked their party outright before the Commons finance committee. But almost every Conservative who spoke at the three-hour hearing said he had been inundated with complaints and tales of hardship from voters.

"I want the committee to know we at the bank are concerned about the social consequences of our policy," Bouey said. "If we knew of a better alternative within our power, we would use it."

The governor never wavered from his position that high interest rates are necessary both to attract foreign investment into the country and to make loans sufficiently expensive that consumers think twice about credit.

Meanwhile, Finance Minister John Crosbie told the finance committee today the latest Bank of Canada interests increases would likely hold economic growth this year to about half the initial forecast of 3.5 per cent.

Crombie bows on lost pensions

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister David Crombie agreed today to seek another $5 million from cabinet so elderly widows and widowers would be reinstated with pension benefits lost six months after their spouses died.

The minister bowed to pressure from both government and opposition MPs during a Commons health committee meeting. Members said they would support the bill if its provisions were extended to cover an estimated 5,000 elderly persons widowed for more than six months.

Currently the bill will allow elderly widows and widowers to continue receiving the spouse's pension benefits until the survivor becomes eligible for old age benefits. The bill applies to spouses of pensioners who died during the six months before the passage.

The spouse's allowance of up to $301 is paid to pensioner's spouses between 60 and 65. It now terminates six months after the pensioner dies.

The bill also ensures continuation of pensions and allowances if the partner receiving the allowance is sentenced to prison for more than 90 days.

Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats criticized the bill, saying they would not support such legislation unless it were extended to at least cover persons widowed for more than six months.

Stanley Knowles, New Democrat House leader, said the bill could be quickly approved in committee and returned to the Commons for third reading if Crombie added a provision reinstating pension benefits to elderly recipients widowed more than six months.

Earlier Crombie told committee members he is seriously considering amending the legislation so recipients cut off from the pension benefits could be reinstated.

But costs would increase to $10 million from the current $4.3 million.

However, the minister finally agreed to seek cabinet approval for the extra funds in return for support of the bill.

It's no slip as she makes a withdrawal

MONTREAL (CP) — With a .38-calibre pistol as her withdrawal slip, a woman described by police as "a sweet young thing" has staged seven successful holdups at downtown banks in the last two weeks.

Investigators say they have no idea who she is and they insist she hasn't hauled off that much.

"But she knows her stuff," one Montreal detective said, "or at least she's learning fast."

During one hold-up she was handed a "bandit pack", a device which explodes automatically to cover the thief with dye, but it failed to go off.

She was handed another pack during a later job, but she swiftly shoved it back into the teller's hands.

She has also shown a preference to working solo, except for one job when she was accompanied by a male accomplice.

But the guy blew it. As they were making their getaway, he ran straight into a nearby traffic police officer who immediately arrested him and brought him in for questioning.

"He didn't tell us a thing," moaned the detective.

U.K. 'marriage' door slamming for Asians

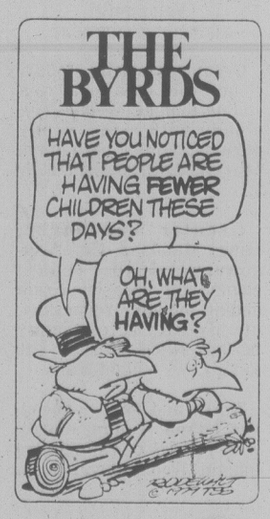
LONDON (AP) - In a bid to curb the number of non-whites coming into Britain, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government plans to bar the husbands and fiances of Asian immigrant women from settling here, Home Secretary William Whitelaw said.

Conservatives and right-wing groups, who have sought a crackdown on non-white immigration, said that many of the marriages are arranged for convenience in defiance of immigration quotas.

Whitelaw told a meeting of Conservative MPs Monday night that a new package of regulations to be introduced next month will considerably reduce the number of Asian men now granted entry into Britain.

However, Whitelaw stressed that the new rules only will apply to women born abroad. British-born non-white women will be able to bring into the country husbands or fiances.

An estimated 40,000 non-whites were allowed to settle in Britain last year, a slight drop over previous years. Most were from Pakistan, India and Bangladesh.



Fired 'hero' has town up in arms

McBRIDE, B.C. (CP) — Furious McBride residents are set to battle the RCMP bureaucracy in Ottawa over the firing of the town's 'folk hero'.

After more than 14 years with the force, Constable Al Thiel got the boot last week for refusing to transfer to Williams Lake, a town in the Central Interior, from this community near the Alberta border.

The 600-member community has launched a banner-and-button campaign to back their man. Many residents are angry at RCMP officials who, not known to take kindly to people who question internal activities, informed them that it is a routine transfer. Orders are orders.

Thiel says his long-time Mountie dream and career is over. He is selling his farm because he cannot pay the mortgage. His wife and two children, seven and nine, are "angry and upset," he said.

Thiel is planning to ask the courts for the chance to give his side at an internal hearing.

Local residents, including farmers, ranchers and loggers, have rallied to his support, saying he is the best policeman they have had in a dozen years.

A city official says vandalism and robberies have plummetted since Thiel arrived two years ago.

"He is an exceptional police officer. He has won the respect of even the toughest McBride delinquent."

Don Reed, organizer of the rally behind Thiel, says there is more to the story than meets the eye. The RCMP is uncomfortable with Thiel's grass-roots type of policing, he said.

Thiel parades the streets after hours and talks to juveniles and suspected petty thieves as well as respected community members.

RCMP Superintendent John Benthám in Ottawa said he needs time to review the case before commenting.

Reed says a recent change in the RCMP policy regarding appeals may work to Thiel's advantage in the courts. Lawyers say chances for an appeal are good.

Korea curfew eased; new CIA boss named

SEOUL (AP) — Acting President Choi Kyu-hah named a new director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency today in what was seen as the first major step to consolidate the government's position following the killing of President Park Chung-hee by the KCIA's former head.

The government also announced relaxation of the curfew and other martial law restrictions, as the fourth day since Park's death passed with no disturbances.

Choi appointed the vice army chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. Lee Hui-sung, as acting KCIA chief to replace Kim Jae-kyu, under arrest for the assassination of Park Friday night.

(Meanwhile, Reuter news agency reported that a top aide to Park is being questioned by martial law authorities on suspicion of taking part in Park's assassination.

(Reuter reported the investigation headquarters of the martial law command said chief presidential secretary Kim Dae-Won was taken for questioning on Saturday.)

Sources said Choi's first appointment was an important move by Choi and the military leaders co-operating with him to take over the now-disorganized secret police organization, a mainstay of support for Park in suppressing dissent and political opposition during the late president's 18 years of autocratic rule.

The sources also said Choi and two other former prime ministers are leading contenders to succeed Park.

They said Choi, a veteran bureaucrat who was prime minister when Park was assassinated, and top military commanders are firmly in charge at the moment. They also said the political leadership of Park's Democratic Republican Party is in disarray and is being ignored by Choi and the generals, the sources reported.

Cried wolf, her shouts were ignored

TORONTO (CP) — Neighbors say they ignored the cries of a 74-year-old woman pinned under a hot oven for two days because she had often called for help without reason.

Today, doctors plan to amputate Marjorie Mattocks' left lower arm because of severe burning and gangrene.

Police investigators assume Mrs. Mattocks, who said she was going to bake some muffins, either slipped or tripped and fell on the open oven door. The weight of her body toppled the stove on top of her arm.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle is joined, the Kennedy mystique versus the power of an incumbent U.S. president. The prize: The 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

On Nov. 7, Senator Edward Kennedy will announce in Boston that he will challenge President Carter for the nomination. On Dec. 4, Carter will announce he wants a second term.

The Kennedy candidacy advanced Monday when his brother-in-law, Stephen Smith, announced formation of the Kennedy for President Committee. He said he hopes "all citizens in this nation who share our belief that Senator Kennedy should be the next president of the United States will join in the campaign we are beginning today."

Smith said one reason Kennedy decided to run is that "he feels the real drift in this country and the sense of a lack of direction."

Asked about the Kennedy committee, White House press secretary Jody Powell commented: "The American people will ultimately decide which candidate they wish to trust to lead them in the difficult times ahead."

Both the Kennedy and Carter camps made it clear they expect a tough battle that may remain undecided until balloting begins at the Democratic national convention in New York City in August.

"We're going to pay very little attention to the polls," said Smith. "I expect this is going to be an extremely long, difficult process."

Smith made it clear that the campaign was on, that there was no longer any need for political charades that would maintain that Kennedy was still making up his mind whether to run.

"This is not an exploratory committee," Smith said. "It's a campaign committee."

While both sides are talking about leadership, there are other issues that will play major roles.

Snow, tornadoes wild

United Press International

A snowstorm surged from the Rockies to the Plains today, burying Colorado and Wyoming in deep drifts and threatening Kansas with near blizzard intensity. Snow whipped the Texas Panhandle and tornadoes struck south of the snow.

Strong winds damaged a motel and overturned two mobile homes in the north central Texas town of Graham, slightly injuring several people.

A tornado touched down in a sparsely inhabited area north of Mineral Wells, Texas, but there were no reports of damage or injury.

The weather service also issued a tornado warning for three north Texas counties and tornado watches were in effect for north central and northeast Texas.

A tornado touched down at Bangs, Texas, eight miles west of Brownwood. Police said the storm brought "a lot of wind, but little damage." The twister tore a television antenna from a roof and knocked down a power line.

Wind-blown snow made travel hazardous across the Texas Panhandle. Forecasters predicted two inches of snow and heavy snowfall was reported at times during the night at Dumas and Stratford. Texas.

40% hike in private care possible

The provincial government has ordered an investigation into private hospitals throughout the province that could result in a 40 per cent rate increase.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said in an interview Monday the study has been ordered to find out whether the provincial government is providing adequate funding for the private hospitals and long-term care facilities.

But the cabinet order which allows the hiring of 40 management consultants and accountants for the three-week study gives them authority to check accounts books, buildings, medical appliances and drugs and "any other thing in or about the hospital" of all private hospitals licensed under the Hospitals Act.

If the operators get their way, the audit will result in increases of up to 40 per cent in what the government pays for their services.

That's how much the private hospitals asked for last year when the government was considering increases, said Pat Shields, president of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals. What they got last March was a 10-per-cent hike, and those rates are to remain in effect until next March.

"But if the study is able to confirm the cost expenditures within the hospitals, it's reasonable to think that the government would reconsider the rates immediately," he said early today.

The study began Monday. It is to cost $75,000.

The provincial government now pays between $14.20 and $35 a day for the extended health care services the hospitals offer mainly to long-term, elderly residents. The operators say that is not enough.

The government started paying them for such services in January, 1978, but the first rate increase didn't come until March, 1979.

"Unfortunately, during that 15-month period, the hospitals that I represent have experienced greater increases in operating costs, particularly for labor," Shields said.

"That stretch is greater than 10 per cent, considerably greater."

"It's a major financial study in order to determine whether or not we should be providing more funding, and all we want to do is find out whether it's necessary.

The audit started Monday night when management consultants hired to do the study met with representatives of Shields' group and the B.C. Association of Private Care Facilities.

To assess operating costs for private facilities, the consultants will look at costs of 13 of the 37 private hospitals represented by Shields' group and 17 of the more than 600 community care facilities represented by the other group.

Both McClelland and Shields denied that the audit might more accurately be called an investigation. Shields said it shouldn't be "construed as an in-depth audit" but rather as an examination of operating costs.

"It is not an investigation," said McClelland after announcing the audit. "The operators of private hospitals have been complaining that we as a government did not pay them enough to break even on their operations and we are basically saying 'show us and then we can reconsider our formula'."

Avtar Singh Toor . . . religious clash

Grim fate awaits Sikh in hard hat

VANCOUVER (CP) — A baptized Sikh testified Monday he is destined to die a leper if he is required to wear a hard hat over his turban.

Avtar Singh Toor, giving evidence at a British Columbia human rights board inquiry, said the leper penalty was laid down by a revered guru in the Sikh faith and is a religious belief that cannot be questioned.

The instruction to baptized Sikhs is that nothing may be worn over the turban. It is one of the five requirements that must be obeyed and it includes the wearing of a special bracelet on the right wrist at all times, the hearing was told.

Toor's strict compliance with religious law clashed with B.C. workers' compensation board regulations. The issue was brought to a human rights hearing after allegations of religious discrimination.

Toor said he was suspended nearly a year ago from his job as a bull edger operator at the Finlay Forest Industries lumber mill at Mackenzie when he refused a company order to wear a hard hat over his turban and an order to secure the religious bracelet he wears on his wrist with tape. The company was carrying out board regulations.

Toor said he came to Canada in 1970 from the Punjab region of India where he had served in the Indian army and had seen combat action. He decided to become a baptized Sikh three years ago at Mackenzie where he was working at the Finlay mill.

He said that before his baptism, he did not wear a turban and wore a hard hat in compliance with company regulations.

Toor testified he was prepared to accept alternate work in the plant not requiring the safety hat but none was offered. He said he came to Vancouver, then went to the Fraser Valley where he now has a job at a lumber mill doing the same job he was doing at the Finlay mill, but does not have to wear a hard hat over his turban.

Bridge repair work resumes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Workmen resumed repair work Monday to the north tower of the damaged Canadian National railways bridge near the Second Narrows crossing of Burrard Inlet.

Ironworkers left the job Sunday because of safety concerns, saying they thought the tower had shifted when a metal shim under one of the tower legs was dislodged.

The tower was tilted well away from the vertical when it was struck two weeks earlier by a Japanese freighter in heavy fog.

CN spokesman Al Menard said engineers inspected the tower and found that a metal plate had moved out of its former position, but the tower had not shifted.

TORONTO (CP) — John Miller, former deputy minister of highways and public works for the Ontario government, has died in Toronto. He was 72.

Cell-smashing damage cost 'in the thousands'

AGASSIZ, B.C. (CP) — It will cost thousands of dollars to repair damage done during a cell-smashing spree at the Kent federal maximum security prison, a prison spokesman said Monday.

"The damage is hard to estimate — it will be in the thousands," said Tony Hawkins, the assistant director of administration of the institute, located about 100 kilometres east of Vancouver.

All prison programs were cancelled Monday and prisoners were being fed in their cells, he said. The new federal prison officially opened Aug. 1 and currently houses about 165 prisoners.

Prison authorities are still investigating the cause of the violence, in which between 30 and 40 prisoners began ripping up the insides of their cells, said Hawkins.

"At about 11:30 p.m. Sunday, one inmate proceeded to start smashing up his cell. Another inmate began doing likewise," Hawkins said. Several more followed suit.

Asked the reasons behind the disturbance, Hawkins said: "We're investigating it. Frankly, we don't know."

"I wouldn't call it a riot," he said. "The inmates started smashing up their cells, that's the long and the short of it."

The first prisoner started a fire in his cell, setting off the prison fire alarm system, then jammed his door with the contents of his cell. The door had to be opened with a sledgehammer, Hawkins said.

The prisoner suffered second-degree burns to his hands and was treated in the institution's hospital, he said.

Heroin the target of new program

The provincial and federal governments are combining forces in a new joint committee to co-ordinate an attack on heroin trafficking.

The committee co-chairmen will be the deputy minister of justice in Ottawa and his provincial counterpart in B.C.

A team of federal and provincial Crown prosecutors will be formed to deal with major heroin cases and more RCMP will be assigned to the province under the agreement setting up the program.

Under the program, it is expected that federal Justice Minister Jacques Flynn will urge the cabinet in Ottawa to amend the Criminal Code to allow voluntary treatment of heroin addicts as a form of sentence or a term of probation.

B.C. has the largest number of known heroin users in the country.

And eat it too

Under B.C. municipal law, no rule compels a candidate for elected office to reside within the municipality in which he chooses to run. Indeed, no rule compels him even to be a legal voter in the municipality.

A person who lives in Surrey could quite legally run for alderman in Fort St. John, if he chose to do so. Cases that extreme rarely come to light, but in bordering urban municipalities, non-resident candidates quite often put their names on the ballot.

It isn't necessarily a problem — the voters can surely decide for themselves whether they wish to elect someone who doesn't live within the municipality. Yet the preponderance of "outsider" candidates in the Victoria aldermanic race this year might make one wonder if the matter isn't getting a little out of hand.

Victoria's 39,000 voters will next month elect eight aldermen. They have a list of 16 from which to choose. But no matter how much they may wish to elect an all-resident council, they won't be able to do so. A clear majority of the candidates (nine out of 16) reside in municipalities other than Victoria.

Indeed, more of them (eight) reside in the neighboring municipality of Oak Bay than do in the city proper (seven). The 16th candidate, Gentry Hudson, lives in View Royal. It is obviously possible that Victoria's new mayor (all the candidates for which do live within the city limits) could end up governing a council without a single other Victoria resident on it.

The geographical distribution of the candidates who do live in the city is also worth noting. Five of the seven live in one of the southern neighborhoods of James Bay, Fairfield or Rockland, as do all four of the mayoralty candidates. One candidate (Joe Richards) represents Victoria West, and incumbent Ald. Robin Blencoe is the sole candidate from the huge area of the city north of Fort Street.

The candidates from Oak Bay and their supporters would doubtless argue that they work or own property in Victoria and hence have as much interest (or at least nearly as much) as they would if they actually lived in the city. Moreover, they would say, Victoria proper is the hub of the entire region; what happens there often affects all of Greater Victoria.

There is a degree of truth to all of this. Yet the same arguments, when applied to other municipalities, sound ludicrous. What happens in Saanich in terms of commercial and industrial development these days may well affect downtown, the western communities and other Saanich peninsula municipalities; yet no one suggests that residents of those other municipalities should try to take control of Saanich council to protect the interests of other parts of the city.

The fact of the matter is that the destinies of the various components of the Capital Region are now almost inevitably intertwined. Decisions about commercial development, about housing densities, about industrial sites in one municipality will always have ricochet effects in others. So will decisions about the level of pay to be given to policemen and firemen.

That is recognized by candidates who choose to live in one municipality but run in another. Victoria becomes the focus for the phenomenom because it is perceived, probably correctly, as the hub of the entire region.

The only logical corollary that can be devised from this intermingling of municipal interests, however, is that it may be time to look again at the concept of amalgamation. If the interests of the various component municipalities of the CRD are so closely entwined as to be inseparable, then perhaps those candidates who live in Oak Bay but are interested in downtown development should be running for a Greater Victoria council.

Under such a plan, the candidates who want to live in the small-town, slow-growth atmosphere of Oak Bay but to push for development in Victoria would have to adopt a regional perspective to meet these diverse objectives. They could not push for growth, perhaps disruptive growth, in the area where they worked while still retreating home to Oak Bay at night. At the same time, revenue-sharing schemes with the more heavily-developed Victoria would help ease the tax burden of the Saanich and Oak Bay homeowners.

Such a plan could not be undertaken without a great deal of study. It might be time to begin such a study now.

Meanwhile, voters should consider carefully the municipality of residence of the candidates for office in their area. Too many of them seem to want to have their cake (the quiet enclave of Oak Bay) and eat it too (lots of growth in Victoria proper).

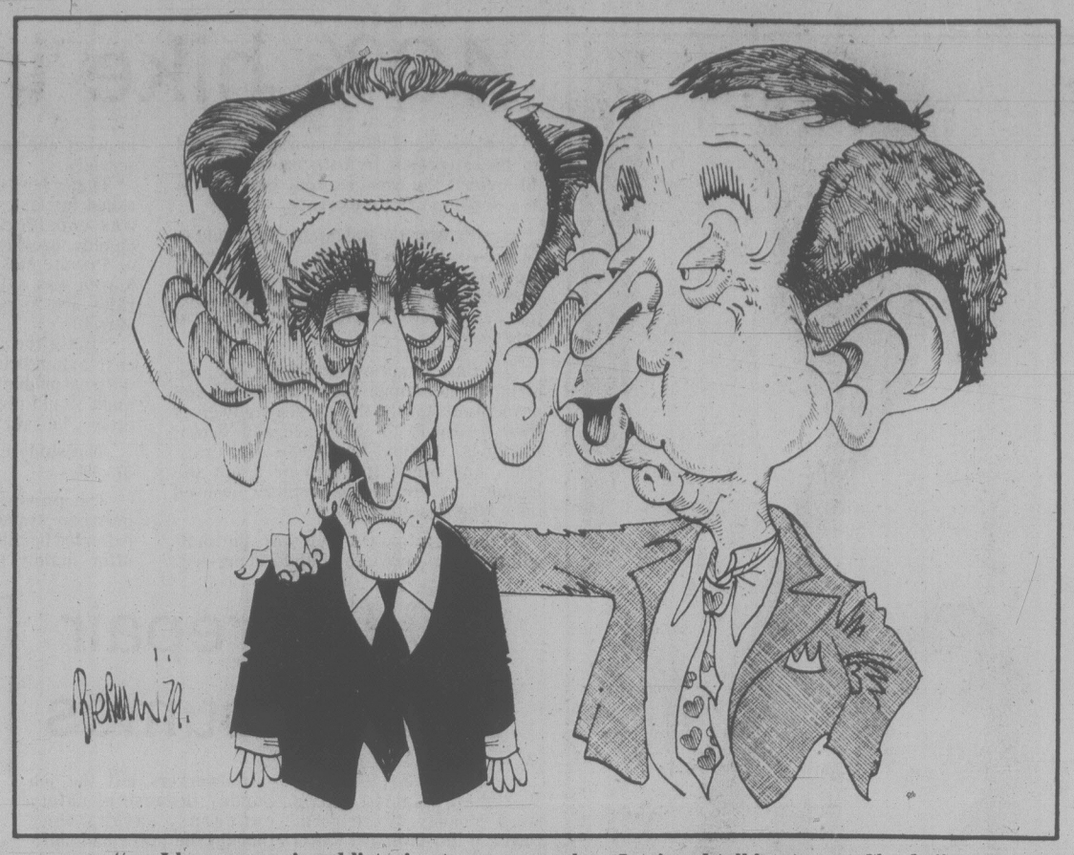
More needed

Saanich alderman Irene Block told council last night that it wasn't her intent to rattle skeletons in anyone's closet when she alleged last weekend that some of her peers were in the pockets of business interests.

Her intent, she said, was to ensure that a knowledgeable electorate goes to the polls in November.

Well, not only do the voters want to be informed, but Ald. Sandy Noel also wanted to be enlightened. But, no amount of prodding, legal threats, or insults would move Block into substantiating her charges.

That's a pity. As it stands now, the voters have cause only to question the credibility of Block.



"...I hope you enjoyed listening to me as much as I enjoyed talking to you, Claude."

Productivity under scrutiny

NEW YORK — Because of inflation, the decline of the dollar and concern that a malaise has come to grip America, a recent abrupt decline in productivity is being given extensive scrutiny.

Dozens of centers to study productivity, generally defined as the output of goods or services per hour of work, have been established across the country. "Every major university seems to have one," said Richard Landry, deputy economist for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. "It's a growth industry."

Seminars are being conducted on what the nation can do to gain more output from its man-hours, and business is speaking out spiritedly on the subject, saying that declining productivity growth demonstrates the need for changing tax laws, altering or eliminating government regulations and reforming the nation's patent laws.

Innnovation incentives

And, in coming days, a long-awaited federal report, the Domestic Policy Review of Industrial Innovation, is expected to be released by the White House. Prepared by the Department of Commerce, that study, delayed a number of months because of the complexity of the problem it addresses, is expected to call for major government action to spur innovation to increase productivity.

Business says it desperately needs concessions. The nation's companies are expected to spend 2.1 percent of revenues on research and development in 1979, the lowest in 20 years. Only with government-spurred investment for new equipment and plants, many businessmen say, can meaningful headway be made on improving productivity.

Productivity growth has declined markedly in the United States.

From 1909, productivity increased an average of 2.5 per cent a year in the nation's private business. From 1947 to 1965, it increased at 3 per cent a year.

Then things began to change. From 1965 to 1973, it rose an average of 2.1 per cent a year. Then it seemed to fall apart. Between 1973 and 1978, productivity increased 1.6 per cent a year. In 1978, the increase was only 1.1 per cent.

In the first six months of 1979, the rate declined by 2.6 per cent.

"The pie isn't getting any bigger," said J. Herbert Hollomon, director of the Center for Policy Alternatives at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "And when the pie isn't getting bigger, there isn't as much to divide," he added, referring to the drop in total production.

One problem in addressing productivity is the complexity of the subject.

"A lot of the things that are said is guesswork," said Sar A. Levitan, director of the Center for Social Policy Studies at George Washington University. "A great deal of the drop in productivity has to do with changes in the structure of the economy.

"We now have a mature economy. I always say, 'If you get old and you can't do the same things you did when you were 30, do you have a crisis or not?' It depends on your definition. And we have more of a service economy, and with a service economy you don't have good measurements. How do you measure the productivity involved in a day in the hospital?"

Much of the growth in previous decades, Hollomon says , was brought about by gains in agriculture productivity, achieved through the widespread introduction of new machines and technology-based farming systems.

Yet, he declared, this technology, while it resulted in gains as high as 7 percent in agriculture in some years, forced millions of Americans from their farms into cities, generating a whole new web of problems.

Levitan noted that in recent years the nation has moved to allow blacks and women to enter many levels of the work force. New workers of any description, lacking experience, can retard productivity growth. Yet, he says a compassionate nation "ought to be willing to pay the price for decisions like that."

Legislative effects

Another major problem in assessing productivity is that no method exists to measure the quality of goods produced, or improvements in air or water quality, or safer work places, all the products of legislation in recent years.

Theodore H. Schell, special assistant for technology in the Department of Commerce, said: "We have made a decision in this country that the federal government should act as a purchasing agent for clean air. We are buying that clean air through regulations and paying for it with increased costs of our products. But increases in the costs of products define productivity."

Finally, no method exists to measure productivity in terms of the consumption of energy, the basis for much of America's productivity gains.

RICHARD GWYN

Tougher economic policies

OTTAWA — While shuffling forward between the looped lines of velvet-covered rope in my friendly, neighborhood bank, my eye was caught by a sign: "Buying a Home? We Have Mortgage Money At," and beneath this, on a small square of fresh cardboard, "15 per cent."

My first reaction was of amusement. The way things are going, banks soon will need blackboards on which to chalk up the latest interest rates.

Puzzlement followed. That morning, I'd heard the Governor of the Bank of Canada, Gerald Bouey, explain to a Commons Committee that he'd hiked up interest rates to fight inflation by "discouraging borrowing and spending." Yet, here was a chartered bank, to which Bouey is, if not the Godfather then the Father Confessor, continuing to urge its clients to borrow and to spend.

Our economic policy resembles Dr. Doolittle's Push-Me-Pull-You pet. But with three heads.

Push — pull

The Bank of Canada pulls us one way. The chartered banks, and the trust companies, and finance companies, and credit card companies, and auto dealers, and department stores, and mail order houses, all push us the othr way.

The government goes both ways. It backs Bouey's high interest rate policy, yet it has just announced a mortgage tax credit scheme to encourage Canadians to borrow and to spend more on their houses.

To part of Bouey's policy, there is no mystery, nor is there any room for argument. We are into the red on our trade account by about $8 million this year. To cover this over-consumption, we have to borrow, just as would an individual who buys a car, say, without the cash to pay for it. To be able to borrow, we have to offer interest rates competitive with those in the U.S. These have just jumped up. So do ours have to, therefore. Otherwise, our dollar will sink.

To the anti-inflation fight, of which Bouey's policy is only a part, there is, however, abundant mystery, and ample room for argument.

In mellow, bankerly tones, even though his tie was loosened to expose an unbankerly shirt collar button, Bouey said all the right bankerly things about inflation.

Unchecked, inflation could lead to "economic and social breakdown." We had arrived at "a crisis of credibility." Though unpleasant, we have to swallow the medicine of high interest rates because, "if inflationary tendencies are not fought earlier, they have to be fought later, and the later the battle is joined, the more painful it is bound to be."

The starting point of the mystery is why, if Bouey indeed is using high interest rates to wrestle inflation to the ground, he hasn't used them earlier. All he's done, in fact, has been to follow, a few days later, the lead of the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank. Indeed, in mid-September, Bouey "skipped" one U.S. rate increase.

JOHN CROSBIE
. . .yet to enter the fray

Despite his rhetoric, the message Bouey has sent out to Canadians has been that he's using high interest rates, not to stop inflation but to stop our dollar from sinking. To end inflation requires, as Bouey put it, "a change in people's expectations."

Today, people expect inflation. And act accordingly. Interest rates are at an historic rate. Yet, at $35 billion, so is outstanding consumer credit. So far this year bank loans have increased by 25 per cent.

High interest rates no longer shock. One reason is that often the same individuals who have to pay more for their borrowings are being paid, into their other pocket, more for their savings. The increased interest rates on Canada Savings Bonds, for example.

Another reason is that interest rates, although high, aren't quite as high as they seem. Today's prime, or minimum, chartered bank lending rate of close to 15 per cent seems sky-high, and is. Yet with inflation at 10 per cent, and likely to go higher next year, because of oil price inceases, the "spread," or the true cost of borrowing money, is only 5 per cent, or about the usual margin.

Here's where the room for argument begins. "Expectations," as Bouey said, "are terribly hard to deal with." To deal with them, high interest rates no longer are enough. The risk is real that today's 15 per cent prime rate will become tomorrow's norm, or that today's rates indeed will check inflation. But only temporarily, so that we'll relax and be back next year, at even higher rates.

Anti-inflation strategy

Rather than just the tactic of high interest rates, we need an anti-inflation strategy. Credit controls, so that chartered banks and the rest don't push one way while Bouey pulls the other way. An end to government giveaways, like the mortgage tax credit scheme and the planned $100 Petro-Canada shares to everyone. An industrial strategy, so that too-much money won't be chasing too few goods and so push up their prices. Higher taxes — yes, the medicine is unpleasant — so that there isn't, anyway, too much money to chase whatever goods are around.

Finance Minister John Crosbie calls himself "Mr. Tough Guy." So far, cheering from the sidelines while Bouey fights alone, he's been only semi-tough. Until Crosbie and the government join the fray, Canadians will continue to expect that inflation, like taxes, always will be with us.

Striking difference

The habit that postal workers have of withdrawing their services from time to time prompts one to recall a postal strike with a difference.

Don't please let Jean-Claude Parrot know about this but soon after the Second World War Chinese postal workers decided it was time to let the government of the day know their grievances and went on strike. But it was a strike with a difference. Workers stayed on the job. However they let it be known that only letters that had no stamps on them would be handled. The effect of this Confucius type thinking was that no one was inconvenienced except the govenment.

All was back to normal within 48 hours. — David C. Wood, P.O. Box 310, Brentwood Bay.

Ration gasoline

The major theme of your recent editorial on Canada's gasoline/heating oil crisis (Key to Stability, Times, Oct. 20) is that an increase in price will help conservation and thus prove desirable. In effect, what you are saying is everyone, regardless of income, must suffer in order that those who squander energy begin to use less, because of the squeeze on their pocketbooks.

In a less cynical age, were conservation necessary, the appeal would be made to our patriotism, to contributing to a worthy national effort at restraint. And the solution would not involve making our number one enemy, inflation, more powerful than ever against us. I think the solution would be, and ought to be now, rationing. In the past rationing was brought on by shortage of supply during a crisis, just as a price increase at this time would be. But the ration, unlike the price, could easily be adjusted so that no one suffered unduly; it was a nuisance, but a necessity, and nearly everyone felt good about doing the right thing. Some of those who didn't, cheated, yet on the whole rationing was effective. After all, when we know it's wrong, most of us aren't going to be greedy, especially if it's against the law; if we only know that being greedy is going to be more expensive, who in affluent Canada will really care much, one way or the other?

Frankly, I doubt that increasing prices will help conserve our dwindling resources. I am not, however, expressing just an opinion when I say that increasing prices will help worsen inflation. Everything will cost more. Faceless corporations may profit, will profit (and don't let's blame OPEC). People will suffer. Is our god profit, or is He human, like you and me? — B. D. Terry, 208-1180 Colville Road.

Great holiday

On July 27 last you kindly published a letter from me regarding a contemplated visit to Victoria after nearly sixty years.

Having just returned home after a most enjoyable time, I would like to thank you for being so good as to allow space for my letter which brought a wonderful response, and has meant my wife and I have been able to meet and make friends with several great people, even at our time of life.

Perhaps you would be good enough to again allow me space to especially thank Bob and Jessie Fox, Fred and Mary Hall, Walter and Vera Carter, Jim and Evelyn Wilmshurst, and Mr. & Mrs. Fred Archer for everything that was needed to make our long journey such a success and so memorable. Also thanks to Nessie Wallace for a few words on the telephone. I do hope I did not miss anyone who remembered me from those far-off days, but if so I should be pleased to hear from them.

Again, thank you for all the help your paper gave me. — Fred Greenwood, 114 Edmund Street, Rochdale, Lancs., England.

Ferries essential

Never again will the residents of B.C. be without ferry service. This was the promise at the time of the formation of the B.C. Ferry fleet.

Unfortunately this promise has not been kept, and a method must be found to prevent the people of the province being made to suffer every time there is a grievance, or their contract comes up for renewal.

The Essential Services Act must be enforced immediately any threatened disruption of normal services takes place. If the Essential Services Act as now written is not adequate, then it must be amended.

We represent the majority of the recreational vehicle clubs of Vancouver Island, and have a membership of over 400 members. — Dogwood Trailer Club of B.C., The Vagabond Trailer Club, The Van Isle Explorers (trailer club), The Independent Order of Foresters.

Right hand man

Within the next six weeks, the people of Victoria, or at least that 30 per cent who are interested enough to vote, will be electing a new mayor, and a city council.

With the added responsibilities, I believe the time has now come when city council make provision for an "Executive Assistant" to the mayor, appointed by the mayor, and a non-public employee.

This suggestion is not that I feel that the city manager or his staff do not serve the people of this city well.

We ask our Mayor to be everything to everybody . . . The City of Victoria is a multi-million dollar operation.

I believe that whether it be $20,000 or $45,000 a year cost, that these funds would be well spent.—Hugh Macdonald, 1-860 Queens Avenue.

Petro-Can share giveaway 'senseless Tory scheme'

One sentence in the task force report recommending the dismemberment of Petro-Canada says it all, with surprising if probably accidental candor: "This procedure would avoid any inequity, except to the taxpayer."

Every Canadian taxpayer would indeed be the victim of this senseless scheme — conceived in the first instance by Prime Minister Joe Clark and his Tories, and hastily endorsed and refined by his hand-picked task force — to give away the profitable parts of our national energy corporation, while retaining in government hands only those that operate at a loss. If Clark goes ahead, as he apparently intends, we will be left with two useless energy bodies in place of one satisfactorily functioning one, and an important tool for getting Canada through the global oil crisis will have been sacrificed in the name of some bizarre Tory ideological hang-up.

Petro-Can, as it is presently structured, makes a great deal of sense. The crown corporation's commercial operations produce profits; these profits are then used to finance the high-risk resource exploration and development which Canada desperately needs, but which the private oil companies are unwilling to undertake.

The profitable operations of Petro-Can would be transferred, under the task force's scheme, to a new private company which would retain the Petro-Can name. All the shares in this new company would be given away free to all "eligible" Canadians; the task force doesn't tell us whether this means every man, woman and child residing in Canada at the time, only adults, taxpayers, only citizens, or what.

Whoever got the shares would, in any event, become a shareholder in a company that was getting off to an exceptionally fine start in life. All of Petro-Can's existing debts would be taken over by the government, while virtually all its lucrative assets would go to the new company.

And yet, attractive as it sounds, this giveaway is really nothing more than an intellectual shell-game. All Canadians are already owners and partners in Petro-Can right now. That's what government ownership means; the crown corporation's profits are our profits as a society, and its successes benefit us all.

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

If anything, ownership under the government's giveaway scheme would be less broadly based than it is now. Sure, all Canadians "eligible" today would end up with shares worth $100-odd. But some years down the road, many Canadians — those not yet born today, or not yet having reached adulthood, or not yet having obtained citizenship — would have no stake in the corporation, while all would be helping pay off the debt assumed by the government.

What's even more important is that this new company would be expected to have no commitment to the national interest. According to the task force, it "must be involved only with the kind of activities and responsibilities that would ordinarily be undertaken and performed by any large Canadian energy company operating in the same environment . . . (It) will not be an instrument for the achievement of the government's public policy objectives."

Its only mandate would be to make a buck, and that limited objective would probably be met without meeting any of Canada's needs in the energy field. The new company would be inheriting enough producing properties to adopt the most conservative policies — no investment in new technologies or high-risk exploration — and still have its profits increase and its stock appreciate.

Meanwhile, since no individual would be allowed to own more than 1 per cent of total shares and no corporation more than 2 per cent, ownership of the company would be too diffuse to permit any real control or supervision. The directors would become a self-perpetuating clique, beholden to no one, running the new Petro-Can just as they pleased. That's tantamount, for all the good it would do any of us, to having no national energy corporation at all.

Then we come to the other side of this bizarre scheme, the new government agency that would take over responsibility for all the unprofitable, costly and yet vitally important high-risk exploration and development now done by Petro-Can.

With no revenues of its own, it would have to run to Treasury Board for every spending authorization. And it would need cabinet approval for every new initiative. Given the slowness of government processes and the need for quick decision-making in the resource exploration field, that would amount to virtual paralysis.

This sort of exploration is necessarily a speculative, hit-or-miss affair, moreover, and that makes it totally unsuited to day-to-day government decision-making procedures. Consider how eager any given minister or bureaucrat would be to be seen authorizing a "gamble" with public funds, and you'll have a pretty good picture of this agency's future.

It all adds up to the worst kind of wrongheaded nonsense, designed to serve no useful purpose and destined, if it goes through, to deprive Canadians of something they badly need.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

After centuries of victorious endeavor, and disdain for the mortal foe, the Royal Navy has at last decided that seasickness may be the Queen's enemy too. The heirs to the victors of a hundred thousand sea-fights now are advertising for someone who can advise them on how to relieve sailors of the compulsion to throw up in Wind Force Ten. The advertisement is couched discreetly, referring only to "motion sickness" and is published at the expense not of the navy but of the Medical Research Council. The advertisement also says that the applicants should preferably have experience of physiology or pharmacology, and that medical experience or experience of working with "human subjects" would be advantageous. The successful applicant would toil for three years at the Institute of Naval Medicine at Alverstoke, Hants.

This could be an historic breakthrough. So far the navy's doctrine on seasickness has been that, generally speaking, it is good for you. Nelson — the navy has always said — was a martyr to seasickness and look what Nelson did for Britain. Moreover, said the navy in the not-too-olden-days, herrings would usually put the sufferer right. Or if herrings did not work there were powerful substitutes. Cayenne pepper, for example (preferably combined with the herrings), or ship's biscuits (preferably combined with the weevils who used to inhabit them). The biscuit-and-weevils theory rested on the presumption that the wretched consumer would be obliged to devote so much energy to the business of separating the weevil from the biscuit that he and his stomach would have no time to consider anything else — like vomiting.

Be that as it may, the navy's new approach to a problem which is at least as serious to the nation's defence as microwaves and mysterious lasers is a welcome development not just to the defenders of our island but also to those who cross the Channel by sea. Very few social situations are more embarrassing than that of the desperate search for the leeward rail. A distinguished British naval commander once, and rightly, abandoned an attempt (which would, given better weather, have been certain to capture Le Touquet temporarily in 1942) on the grounds that 3,600 seasick soldiers could not be expected to storm up beaches. Seasickness, then, has an important military significance. It is pleasing to know that after all these centuries the Admiralty, hand perhaps discreetly covering mouth, has come to agree.

UNION NATIONALE leader Rodrique Biron at unveiling of statue of party founder and former Quebec premier Maurice Duplessis in Trois-Rivieres two years ago. The UN gave up ghost last week.

End of an era in Quebec

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

QUEBEC — The Union Nationale is dead. Long live the Progressive Conservative Party of Quebec.

Rodrigue Biron, UN leader since 1976, summoned the press last week to announce the demise of the party founded by Maurice Duplessis. Biron did not say that its successor will be the Progressive Conservative Party. He couldn't. But that is the significance of the resolution passed Oct. 21 by the UN's executive council and two days later by the caucus of elected members. It proposes that "the leader be given a mandate to take whatever steps are needed for the unification of all the forces of the right in Quebec in a political party to be formed by all those who support that option."

The new party, Biron said, is to bring together "all small-c conservatives. We'll form a committee over the next few weeks and we'll discuss with the partners who decide to come with us." Then, in the spring, after the referendum, the new party will be formed, in time to fight the next provincial election.

A political party of the right. Not the UN — though some UN members and a former minister, Armand Russell, will fight to retain the historic name. But Biron conceded the UN's defeat. "The present UN, without considerable change, cannot hope to attract all those who favor a political force on the right."

The fact is that the UN is in such bad shape that only its rebirth with the support of the federal Tories in Ottawa can possibly promise it any kind of future. That was the real message from Biron.

He and his party leaped before they were pushed. They decided to negotiate a merger with the Conservatives — and whoever else will join them — while they still have some semblance of a party to negotiate with. Time is pressing. Had they waited a few more months there might have been no UN left.

The UN has been in trouble ever since the Parti Quebecois won the election of November 1976. Once before, in 1973, the PQ threatened to take power and the polarization of the province between the Liberals and the PQ drove the UN right off the electoral map. The Liberals took 102 members out of 110 in the House. That lopsided result lulled the population in the following election, in 1976. People did not believe the PQ could win. At the same time there was anger among non-francophones against the Liberals for passing the language law, Bill 22. That gave the UN a new lease on political life and 11 members were elected.

But the province was polarized again, as has been shown by every poll and by the three by-elections since 1976. The Liberals won all three with big majorities; the UN fell to about 6 per cent of the vote.

With Claude Ryan in the National Assembly and the referendum getting closer, the polarization increases. Everyone is looking to the three Nov. 14 by-elections to outline the future. Unlike the first three, none is in a former Liberal seat. If the PQ loses two or three of those seats the government's authority will be undermined.

But the UN is in such poor shape that it announced it would not be fielding a candidate in any of the by-elections. It was "saving its resources for the general election," according to the announcement. But could it even reach the general election?

The worst was yet to come. When the referendum campaign gets under way, there are likely to be only two options on the ballot, a yes and a no. The law requires a single umbrella committee for each option, and Claude Ryan will be heading the no umbrella committee. That leaves little room for the UN.

The prospect in the next provincial election is for extreme polarization. None of the UN members, except possibly Biron, could hope to be re-elected. The chances of more defections were great. Already there is little evidence of party discipline or of acceptance of Biron's leadership: the nine members behave to a considerable extent like independent members.

The pressure to co-operate in the formation of a provincial Conservative party while the federal party controls the perks of power has been considerable ever since the federal election. Biron read the handwriting on the wall. It said: PC of Q.

So glad to be recessed

Russell Baker

Listening to the economics wizards talk about the recession, you get the feeling that things are going to get better as soon as they get worse.

Some economists now talk about recession as a "corrective" in much the same way that young people in laxative commercials on television afflict their poor old mothers and dads with patent medicines that promise "regularity." As a matter of fact, I was moping sluggishly around the house the other day with no more zip than a drenched cockroach when one of these exuberant economists barged in.

"You know what's wrong with you, old-timer?" he asked.

"I probably need a new denture adhesive with twice as much sticking power," I said. "Something that'll enable me to chew taffy without risking public embarrassment."

"Nonsense," said he. "You don't wear dentures."

"Couldn't afford them if I wanted to," I said. "Not at today's prices."

"Exactly," said he. "And what accounts for today's prices? Inflation, my friend. And not only inflation. You are suffering from decline of the dollar, the soaring price of gold, turmoil in the commodities market, falling productivity, soaring interest rates, exorbitant rises in the wholesale price index as well as the consumer price index, galloping balance-of-payment deficits, the housing shortage . . . "

Economists rarely fail to put me to sleep. It's a wonder nobody has thought of rectifying their juices and selling them as sleeping potions. This one shook me awake.

"I have the perfect corrective for your condition," he was saying. It was a set of graphs illustrating the tendency of lines to zigzag as soon as they make contact with paper.

"I don't want any," I said.

"Ah ha!" he cried. "You think these graphs illustrate the increase in the money supply — M-1 and M-2 — soaring toward imminent collision with the incomprehensible rediscount rate for banks' most favored customers, which has little impact on auto loans."

"Mercy," I said.

"And why do you think that? Because, my friend, you are an imbecile about economics! Can the M-1 curve possibly intersect the rediscount rate? Of course not! Can the M-2 curve impact on the energy crunch? Hah! No, my friend, never! What I offer you here is the new improved economic miracle — corrective recession."

★ ★ ★

"How many do I take?"

"That's the beauty part. You don't take any. It's strictly for your neighbors."

Now he was talking my kind of medicine. It was the answer to a coward's prayer. Imagine: whenever you get a toothache you send your dry cleaner to have his jaw drilled by the dentist, and your toothache stops. That's the kind of thing he was selling.

"With your recession, what happens," he told me, "is first off, a lot of marginal people become unemployed. Are you marginal?"

"Not yet."

"So what's it cost you? Nothing."

"And a lot of small-businessmen go bankrupt, right?"

"Exactly," he said, "and what are a few small-businessmen to you?"

"I'm not a small-businessman," I said.

"Okay, so now the electric companies turn out the lights on a few paupers. That's tough, but not for you as long as you've got jack in the bank to pay the juice merchants."

"That's tough," I agreed. "What's going to keep these people who want light from sticking a gun in my ribs and taking all my electricity money when I'm leaving the bank?"

"They'll be so rigid with cold they won't be able to bend their pistol fingers around the trigger," he pointed out. "That's because the oil folks will cut off their heat for nonpayment of bills."

"Won't the people who have to take the recession corrective become short-tempered about it and behave insultingly to those of us who prescribed it for them?"

"Not if they're patriots," he said. "If we're going to get inflation down to 8 or 9 per cent again and restore the world's faith in America's willingness to suffer, we must have Americans who will do some suffering. Those who are chosen should be proud to serve their country."

"Economics has done it again," I said, taking a batch of recessions to distribute to the neighbors. Then I had an inspiration.

"If a recession can alleviate the crisis," I suggested, "why don't we shoot for a total cure and have a full-scale depression?"

He blanched. Maybe economists are even closer to being marginal than all the evidence indicates.

with a ceiling of $29.37 set by OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Lougheed's remarks elicited a sharp reaction in Edmonton and Ottawa, with opposition critics complaining that the Alberta premier was bargaining in public and was doing a disservice to the country.

Liberal finance critic Herb Gray said in Ottawa that Lougheed was being narrow-minded and did not realize that no province can be strong if Canada as a whole is weakened.

"It's shocking to hear a premier supposedly in favor of Canada staying together talking like this," said Gray. "His apparent unwillingness to agree to a reasonable formula for the price of oil in Canada is doing a disservice to Alberta and Canada as a whole."

Gray said Prime Minister Clark should be prepared to set a price reflecting the over-all interests of Canadians.

Bob Rae, the federal NDP finance critic, said Lougheed's comments were an elaborate bargaining ploy and his position was not acceptable to most Canadians.

"My reaction is that Mr. Lougheed is engaged in some pretty high-stakes brinkmanship," said Rae.

In Edmonton, Bob Clark, the Social Credit opposition leader in the provincial legislature, said Lougheed was grandstanding.

Clark said he doubted that Lougheed was serious in saying prices would be raised to world levels and added Albertans should not have to pay that price.

"It's our resource, we own it," he said.

Clark said he thought other Canadians would see Albertans as tough bargainers but good citizens of Canada.

Grant Notley, the lone New Democratic Party member in the Alberta legislature, said Lougheed's speech means the Alberta government is headed for a major confrontation with the federal government and the other provinces.

An increase in prices to world levels would destroy economic diversification in Alberta, be catastrophic for the province's farmers and hurt the national economy, Notley said.

Lougheed's comments caught at least one of his cabinet ministers off-guard. Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Dick Johnston said he was unaware of the statements until he was informed by reporters.

Probe starts on lost seaman

An investigation is under way into the disappearance at sea Sunday of AB Arthur Stanley Campbell from the destroyer-escort HMCS Qu'Appelle.

Campbell was last seen at 7:10 a.m.

The Qu'Appelle was joined in the search for Campbell on Monday by two U.S. Navy Orion anti-submarine aircraft and a U.S. Coast Guard C130 Hercules aircraft.

The Qu'Appelle is now en route to San Diego where she will join HMCS Saskatchewan and HMCS Mackenzie.

The report estimates that on any given day in B.C. 100 babies will be born, one will be stillborn, three children will die, one child will be abused and seven children will be injured in a motor vehicle accident.

Another 43 children will require hospital treatment following other violence, eight juveniles will be in court, 23 teenage girls will become pregnant and 13 children will be taken into care by the human resources ministry.

Tonkin estimates there are 1,970 children in institutions because of behavior disorders, mental retardation, juvenile correction or physical disability.

An additional 9,100 children are in the care of the human resources ministry and 4,500 adolescents are on probation.

The province's infant mortality rate has also declined, but the report says the number of deaths among babies between the ages of one month and one year has changed little during the last decade and half of these deaths occur outside the hospital.

It also found that B.C.'s infant mortality rate is worse than those of Sweden and Japan.

The study by the University of B.C.'s pediatrics department draws on information from federal and provincial governments.

Glazier worried about oil fires

Five major fires in James Bay in 2½ years are cause for concern whether the neighborhood has sufficient fire protection, Ald. Murray Glazier said today.

The small fire hall at Superior and Oswego may not be big enough or have enough equipment to deal with major blazes in the area, he said.

The Ogden Point docks burned, Capital City shipyards were destroyed, there were two major apartment fires on Menzies and McQuade's warehouse on Erie had a fire on the weekend, Glazier noted.

He said he was also concerned about the possibility of oil fires at the Texaco and Standard storage stations on the waterfront. Texaco, with 1.3 million gallons of various flammable products, was only 1½ blocks from the McQuade's fire Saturday night and Standard's tanks with 662,000 gallons are not much farther away.

"We've got the frightening potential of the petroleum storage," said Glazier.

"We've got an excellent fire department but the oil storage tanks present the possibility of that kind of fire that's just beyond the ability of the fire department to handle."

He plans to raise the issue at council's fire prevention services committee meeting Thursday.

Pair face charges in tank car smash

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Two men have been charged with mischief in connection with a train derailment Oct. 20 that cut the B.C. Rail line 20 kilometres south of this Peace River community.

RCMP said today the charges were laid against Yves Trembly, a former B.C. Rail employee, and Stanley Newdorf, both of Fort St. John.

The trestle was destroyed in a spectacular fire after 11 tank cars containing gasoline, butane and diesel fuel, rolled off a siding onto the trestle and derailed.

The trestle, which leads to a bridge over the Peace River, burned for several hours before the flames were contained.

The incident threatened exports of timber, grain, sulphur and petroleum products, but the railway has made arrangements to truck materials to Dawson Creek for loading aboard trains there.

Instead of replacing the trestle, which spanned a Peace River flood plain, the railway has decided to restore the tracks on an earthfill bridge.

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The Emily Carr house closes Friday after seven years as a museum, gallery and art school operated by Rosalie and Bill Bowie.

They didn't want to leave but Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis announced the closure of the house on Friday after disagreement over a new lease.

Although the press release stated the Emily Carr Arts Centre Society was pulling out, Bill Bowie takes the decision as an eviction notice, "a bit of a dirty trick."

The society thought it was still negotiating, he said, and was awaiting a reply to an Oct. 17 letter rejecting Curtis' proposal of a lease allowing either side to terminate on only three months' notice.

The old lease required the society or the government, which owns the house and property and provides free heat and light, to give 12 months' notice. Bowie also said that at a meeting in June this year Curtis mentioned the possibility of a two-year lease, but nothing more was heard.

The Bowies had also asked the province for financial support for their various programs, as well as the use of the house.

Barry Kelsey of the provincial secretary's ministry said Monday the government does contribute to the centre indirectly, through grants to the Community Arts Council which funds the Bowies and other local groups.

He said the government definitely took the letter written to Curtis on Oct. 17 as a decision by the society to pull out regardless. The government was not prepared to alter the new lease and thought the arrangements satisfactory, he said.

Barbara Mather, president of the Emily Carr Arts Centre Society, said the Bowies have spent $21,000 of their own funds since they started the centre in 1972. One-time federal grants, donations, lesson fees and sales of books and reproductions have also kept the centre afloat.

"We have struggled to keep this centre and historic home open and available to the public for over seven years and now find it impossible without the support of our three levels of government and the people of B.C.," said the Bowies in a letter.

"We feel somebody else should carry some of the burden," said Bill Bowie in an interview.

He said they can't keep operating the house not knowing whether they'll be allowed to stay past three months.

"It makes it hard to plan anything."

The centre's gallery has exhibited the work of more than 250 artists since it opened, and had further exhibitions lined up well into 1980 and 1981.

But the current display of paintings and photographs by John Andre of the Provincial Museum and a selection of international children's art organized in Russia will be the last unless the province changes its mind.

"It's a peculiar situation but we seem to have inherited Emily Carr's struggle," said Bowie, referring to the artist's difficulties in gaining local acceptance for her paintings.

"We seem to be battling the bureaucracy of government."

Curtis said the government plans to renovate the house at 207 Government where Emily Carr was born in 1871, and will continue to maintain the building and provide public access.

"We hope that in due course the society or a similar organization might be in a position to carry on a program in the house, compatible with the history of the building and with Emily Carr's interest in children," said Curtis.

Early Victoria merchant Richard Carr had the house built in 1863 on the corner of a 10-acre parcel which once stretched up to Beacon Hill park. In her book The House of Small, Emily Car wrote:

"Then he built what was considered in 1863 a very big fine house. It was all made of California redwood. The chimneys were of California brick and the mantlepieces of black marble. Every material used in the building of Father's house was the very best, because he never bought anything cheap or shoddy."

The city's heritage home inventory, This Old House, describes it as "one of James Bay's finest and oldest residences." It is not a designated heritage house, but the federal government has declared it a national historic site, and the province acquired ownership from the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce several years ago.

TOWN TALK

Exactly half of the aldermanic candidates in the city live in Oak Bay. Last time they had three of the eight council seats — this year a probable majority is in the cards.

Candidates who live in the city proper are in the minority. Besides the eight Oak Bay candidates, a ninth, Gentry Hudson, lives in View Royal. Just seven of the 16 candidates are resident Victorians.

In none of the other core municipalities is there such a marked imbalance. For example, among the 12 aldermanic and two mayoralty candidates in Saanich only student Bob Geddes, aiming for a council seat, lives outside Saanich — down in Fairfield.

This lopsided candidates list is due to the lack of any residence requirement in the Municipal Act. As long as you're a Canadian citizen and a B.C. resident, you can live in Oak Bay and run in Victoria, or Alert Bay or Dawson Creek.

★ ★ ★

Last-minute Victoria mayoralty candidate David Alan Borgstrom is described by friends as a bit of an eccentric who will make what was up to now a quiet three-way race more interesting.

"He'll add a little color in a campaign that badly needs it," friend and fellow UVic student David Reilly said Monday.

Borgstrom, 32, is in his fourth year at university, majoring in psychology. He has worked summers as a social worker and probation officer.

His strategy apparently is to tackle the apathetic majority — the two-thirds of Victorians who never bother to vote. He figures if he can get a quarter of them, he's a shoo-in.

Tried dialing B.C. Tel information in Victoria lately?

Town Talk checked for numbers twice this morning. The first time, the operator said she had only one listing under the requested name and that was on Granville.

"In Victoria?" we asked. "Tee, hee," said the opeator. "I was looking in Vancouver."

The second time, a different operator had the same problem, not finding a listing for a requested name.

"There's no listing under that name in Victoria?" we persisted. "Oh, Victoria!" exclaimed the operator. "I was checking Vancouver."

Why the confusion? It seems the information operation for the entire province is now in Vancouver, and even when you dial 113 for local information, your call zings across the strait.

So even if you dial local information, you might as well get used to preceding your request with "I want a Victoria number, please."

Goodbye bank, howdy credit union.

That's the refrain in Cordova Bay where the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce closed its doors (not enough business) and the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union has stepped in smartly.

The bank — who does its research? — claimed things were too slow but the credit union did a survey and found it would be profitable to open up shop.

Word is it will offer full facilities and have a staff of four or five.

Noel must go it alone on Block suit

Ald. Sandy Noel of Saanich today said he will decide by mid-week whether to take Ald. Irene Block to court over her remark that some aldermen used a slush fund supplied by big business to finance their election campaigns.

But if he launches a suit he won't be supported by council, Mayor Mel Couvelier said.

Council can't take legal action and its doubtful any individual alderman could either, Couvelier said.

Noel said he is concerned his good reputation could be ruined by the comment and is discussing the situation with his lawyer and other aldermen.

Block did not mention any names, but Noel said he is one of four aldermen on council who consistantly take a pro-development stance.

"I feel that Irene Block has made some unfair statements taking cheap shots at the pro-development side of council," Noel said.

Block made her comments about the secret municipal slush fund Friday at the start of a weekend conference about women in politics. The conference was held at the University of Victoria.

Block today said she has nothing to retract and is prepared to stand behind her comments .

"The innocent people, the municipal aldermen, are not a bit upset — they are amused," she said.

Block did not mention any names and did not offer proof to back up her remarks, but refused to retract her statements at Noel's request Monday night at a council meeting.

Noel said he wants to talk with the other aldermen he feels are affected by what he called Block's "scurrilous" remarks.

"I would like to feel I have the support of the other members. I won't ask for it, but I'd like to sense it."

Mayor Couvelier said Monday night council as a whole will not become involved in the dispute.

Elaborating today, he said moral and ethical questions about the origin of campaign funds always surface around election time.

It is impossible to place restrictions on time and the origin of dollar contributions to an individual's election campaign, Couvelier said.

"Everybody recognizes the need for support. You can't legislate motivation."

Eight services set for Nov. 11

Eight memorial services will be held on Remembrance Day Nov. 11 in the Victoria area, the largest on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings at 11 a.m.

Among those laying wreaths there will be Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving, Rear-Admiral Michael Martin and Esquimalt MP Donald Munro.

Royal Roads Military College will provide a band and marching contingent. Along with veterans, militia units and cadets, there will also be contingents from the Canadian Forces Fleet School, the 3rd Battalion of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the destroyer-escorts HMCS Gatineau and HMCS Restigouche.

Oak Bay will hold its service at the War Memorial on Beach Drive at 9:50 a.m.

A 10 a.m. ceremony will be held at the Veterans' Cemetery on Colville Road.

Esquimalt's ceremony will take place in Memorial Park at 11 a.m. Personnel from the PPCLI, HMCS Provider, HMCS Yukon and HMCS Terra Nova and the Naden band will attend.

Services will be held at the same time at Sidney at 2440 Sidney Avenue and Sooke on Eustace Road next to the Royal Canadian Legion.

Saanich's service will be at 2 p.m. at the memorial on Vernon Avenue.

The Victoria Remembrance Day Committee will run its annual poppy campaign from Nov. 1 to 10.

Those able to help should phone the committee's headquarters at 625 Courtney Street. The phone number is 386-2533.

Another blaze hits Seagate

A woman and her two daughters were taken to hospital with smoke inhalation early this morning when fire destroyed most of the third floor of the Seagate apartment building at 707 Esquimalt.

A fire department spokesman said the $75,000 blaze also caused extensive smoke damage in the block and forced 325 occupants to leave while firefighters brought it under control.

The 1 a.m. fire is believed to have been caused by a faulty television set but investigation has not been completed.

Third floor resident Mrs. Beatrice Edwards, 54, was admitted to Victoria General Hospital, where her condition is satisfactory. Her daughters Valery, 21 and Ronda, 16, were released after treatment.

It was the third major fire at the Seagate since 1972. In 1976 a woman tenant was severely injured jumping from her fire-threatened suite to the ground.

Arson was suspected in another.

First man to file lost in the crush

The newsstand owner and businessman, only a few months over the voting age of 19, was the first to declare his candidacy six weeks ago.

His name was left out of the Times' list of candidates published Monday.

But he's certainly a candidate. Travis claims to have canvassed more than 5,000 homes already, and encountered negative comments on his age at only a handful.

Victoria also had a couple of last-minute candidates for council seats.

Perennial candidate Joe Richards from Victoria West, who attends every council meeting and prints a weekly "City Watchdog" report in the classified ads of this paper, filed his papers just before noon.

B.C. Hydro bus driver Gentry Hudson was another aldermanic late entry. The 37-year-old resident of View Royal is an Amalgamated Transit Union official and delegate to the Victoria Labor Council.

His campaign is directed at preserving the city's neighborhoods and architectural heritage. The whole city should be designated a heritage zone, says Hudson, and property owners ought to convince council of the need for exemption — not the other way round as is now the case.

In Oak Bay, there are three two-year seats vacant this year — not four as reported — and two one-year seats, not one. Got it?

And Bill Smith, the 41-year-old travel agent who's running for one of the two-year seats, wants voters to know his name isn't Henry as it appeared elsewhere.

Retired Oak Bay resident Jack Rhodes was another late candidate for alderman behind the Tweed Curtain, making a total of six running for the three two-year spots.

In Esquimalt, meet mayor-elect Ken Hill, a former alderman who's an electrical foreman at the dockyard in CFB Esquimalt.

He won by acclamation when nominations closed and there were no other contenders. Hill will succeed Mayor Art Young.

Sidney also acclaimed its mayor. Housewife Norma Sealey was unopposed.

Elsewhere on Vancouver Island, few mayors got back unopposed.

Lumber shipper A.M. Ostergaard was acclaimed mayor of Tahsis village, Comox mayor Dr. George Piercy was unopposed and Port Alice got contractor Gordon Graham as its new mayor. Qualicum's Art Skipsey was also acclaimed mayor. But they were the exceptions.

Neighboring North Cowichan has a four-way contest, with Mayor George Whittaker facing three businessmen candidates — Graham Bruce, contractor Dennis Hogan and hotel manager Gerry Smith, a former mayor.

At Courtenay, printer Bill Moore who has been mayor for several years is under the gun from merchant Bob McPhee.

Port Alberni incumbent Jim Robertson, a realtor, faces a challenge from mill worker Antonio Sarinha while eight candidates battle for three seats on council.

Even the twin fishing communities of Tofino and Ucluelet have two-way contests for mayor. Realtor Rob Burley and businessman Dennis Klee both want the top job in the latter, while Tofino incumbent Penelope Barr will have to beat businessman Warren Bernard.

For Sooke school board's Belmont zone, there were two more candidates — housewife Carole Carver and teacher-accountant Don Lindsay.

Weeping Willie walks away

NEW YORK (AP) — With a tear in his eye and an ache in his heart, Willie Mays has walked away from baseball.

Forced to choose between the game he loves and a lucrative contract to work for an Atlantic City hotel and gambling casino, Mays announced he would terminate his active relationship with the sport.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn had warned Mays that the Hall of Famer could not maintain his position as a part-time coach and goodwill ambassador for New York Mets if he accepted the job with Bally Manufacturing Co., operators of the Park Place Hotel in Atlantic City.

Mays met with Kuhn for one hour Monday morning before heading for the news conference that made his move official.

"The commissioner didn't try to change my mind," Mays said as tears welled in his eyes. "We just talked the matter over. When I saw that his decision was going to stand, I said 'thank you' and got up and walked out.

"Don't blame the commissioner. The decision was with me. We left with kind words. I have no bitterness in my heart."

Still, Mays seemed troubled by the turmoil his decision had caused and by the impression that Kuhn had barred him from baseball. He said he felt he had been lumped in the same class as Shoeless Joe Jackson, the Chicago White Sox outfielder who was banned from baseball as a result of the 1919 Black Sox scandal.

"The commissioner told me the only restriction was that I couldn't wear a uniform and represent any team," Mays said. "I can still play in old-timers' games and do other special events. I can always return to baseball if I give up this job."

Mays will do community work, visit hospitals and work with youngsters in his promotion position with Bally. He will be paid $100,000 a year for the first three years, and his salary will increase over the next seven years to a top of $150,000 in 1989. He was making $50,000 a year from the Mets under terms of an agreement he signed with Joan Payson, the late owner of the club, after New York acquired him from San Francisco in 1972. That deal had two years remaining.

"Baseball has been my life," Mays said. "I worship the game."

He said he did not plan to test Kuhn's edict in the courts.

"I am not going to fight baseball. If I challenge the commissioner, I challenge baseball. I am not going to do that."

Kuhn said his primary concern in the Mays affair was protecting the integrity of baseball.

"The greatest single thing we've got in this game is integrity," the commissioner said. "The commissioner's main job is to protect that integrity."

Kuhn defended the involvement of some baseball figures, particularly owners, in horse racing.

"When I came into office in 1969, there was an acceptability of baseball's involvement in racing," he said. "Commission Landis had not tolerated it. It gradually was accepted by succeeding commissioners. When I became commissioner, it was a fait accompli."

Kuhn said he had explained his position to Mays and Bally.

"I love Willie — I always have admired him," the commissioner said. "I told him he had never done anything wrong. I am disappointed that the decision could not have been made without such sensationalism."

Mays is not the first baseball figure to go with Bally. Al Rosen resigned as president of New York Yankees last summer to take an executive post with the company.

Rosen said last week he still holds stock in the Yankees and has not been asked to sell it by the commissioner or anyone else.

"I don't know why the commissioner made the decision," Mays said. "I have regrets because I love baseball. But it's very important that I take care of my family."

WILLIE MAYS...explains decision

Lucas trains sensible way

By BILL WALKER

Len Lucas is a trainer with a philosophy that most horse players may not associate with trainers.

It's not win at all cost for Len. He's been at the trade too long for that, a trade that began at the old Willows track in 1934.

No. What Len says about his avocation is this:

"I just think it takes good common sense to be a trainer, to basically run a horse where it belongs.

"I am very fortunate," he said of the owners he trained for this season at Ex Park and those for whom he is handling horses at Sandown. "I have sponsors who are very realistic," he said. "They try to run their horses where they have the best chance and not out of their class."

Born in Victoria, but now a resident of Ladner and with a farm at Kamloops, Len is the senior man on the backstretch and he has almost total recall.

He can even remember the names of the five horses he first trained for owner Harold Mizen. "They were Fannie Fasterson, Ruth McLean, Lord Goldstream, Prince Goldstream and Goldstream Girl," he said. "And they didn't do too well," he added.

He also remembers the beginning of racing at Sandown. "I was one of those helping Bob and Jack Randall pick the rocks off the track." he said.

"Bill Randall was the bird-dropping scrubber in the grandstand," he laughed.

Over it all, Lucas says racing has been good to him and racing secretary Aubrey Davies says in return: "Len has been good for racing. If we need a horse to fill, not only here, but at Ex Park, Len will always do his best to help."

And Len has been doing well here after what he calls a fairly successful season at Ex Park. He leads the trainers at the meeting with six wins. He has also had four seconds and a third.

As to claiming horses, he rarely suggests that an owner claim a horse. "I like to have them pick the horse, then I will look it over and make my recommendation," he said.

The Earl Of Bon and Barbie Baby are the best two horses that Lucas trains here, while the best he ever had was a three-year old named Sad Valley which ran with the best three-year olds several years ago.

Len sees some disturbing changes over the past few years since the trotters came.

"We aren't the only game in town anymore," he suggested of the drop in crowds and mutuel play. "Fans here are a little different. They're not really thoroughbred fans or standarbred fans," he said. "They come to any kind of a horse race, to watch and to bet a little. And the trotters just have to have drained some of the money the thoroughbreds used to get," he said.

The limestone on the track has also had its effect, says Lucas. "This was the kindest race track for horses anywhere until they put limestone on it," he said. Now it's hard on thoroughbreds. They run differently than trotters and the limestone tears at their heels when they dig in. In the old days we could come over here with a sore horse and go home with a sound horse. Not anymore. However, it's better this year than it was last," he added.

Racing and horses are everything for Len. "You know when they put up that sign at Ex Park — "only 10 more racing days" — many trainers are probably happey the season is about over. Not me. I'm sorry. Because then I almost have nothing to do."

In the off season, Len winters about 20 horses on his farm, maybe takes a short trip, but always it is the next season he is looking forward to. "Retire, not me," he said of his age, 65.

There were no winners for Len on Monday. He only had the one horse entered, Charm Bracelet which he is handling for a friend, and it ran out of the money in the third. But winning or losing doesn't bother him.

"You know when we came over here, I figured on about five wins, so maybe I'm already ahead," he said.

Otherwise, Fast Gambler provided the big surprise on the track, the four-year old bay gelding getting through on the rail to win a four-horse photo from Big Midget, Flyability and Commander Jim in the featured seventh and return $58.70.

In the jockey department, Judy Carrier won her first on Star With Merit ($49.30) in the first, the quinella returning $152.80; and, in the eighth, Pat Owen won her sixth of the meeting, on only 16 mounts, on Decour ($5.90), the Exactor, Decour to Proliner returning a healthy $114.20

Lomas win final

VANCOUVER (CP) — Quarterback Terry Cox threw for one touchdown and ran for two others to lead Vancouver Meralomas to a 35-6 win over Richmond Raiders in the Big Four Junior Football League final Sunday at Empire Stadium.

The Meralomas now meet Regina Rams next Sunday in the western Canada final in Regina. The Rams whipped Fort Garry Lions of Winnipeg 54-7 in Sunday's other western semi-final.

Flyers down Gulls

Dave Bodger hammered in two goals Monday to lead Fuller Lake Flyers to a 5-3 South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League win over Juan de Fuca Gulls at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Ken Ellison, Ken Carter and Len Meyer each scored once for Flyers while Terry Coglin, Dan Doneley and Dan Houston replied for Gulls, who trailed by period scores of 2-1 and 5-3.

Victory moved Flyers into sole possession of second place, four points behind leading Saanich.

Hawks don't rate them as gambles

ATLANTA (AP) — Seattle Seahawks used three fourth-down conversions to down Atlanta Falcons 31-28 in a National Football League game Monday night and quarterback Jim Zorn said, "We don't call them gambles."

Zorn, who scored his team's first touchdown on a 34-yard, fourth-down run and set up another with a 20-yard pass to kicker Efren Herrera on a fake field goal attempt, added: "Unusual maybe. You don't see it every day. But it's a blast. It's fun.

"We work on it, seriously. We don't laugh about it but everybody enjoys it. We just let it all out tonight."

Two of those gambles came in the second quarter when the Seahawks erased a 14-0 deficit with a three-touchdown explosion within 7½ minutes.

But after building a 31-21 advantage, the Seahawks had to survive a late rally that produced one touchdown and another threat by the Falcons in the final minute before Dave Brown sealed the victory with an interception in the end zone with 30 seconds left.

The Seahawks actually attempted four fourth-down conversions but failed on one at their 32 when a pass by punter Herman Weaver to Jesse Green netted only nine yards, three short of a first down.

"I would have felt better if we had made all four of them," coach Jack Patera said. "But I thought they were all good gambles."

The victory improved Seattle's record to 4-5, good for a fourth-place tie with Kansas City Chiefs in the American Conference West Division. The Falcons, 3-6, remained in third place in the National Conference West.

Coach Leeman Bennett of Atlanta said, "I thought we played well enough at times to win, but what let us down was our over-all kicking game."

Seattle, appearing on a regular-season national telecast for the first time, tied the score 14-14 in the second quarter on a four-yard pass from Zorn to Sherman Smith.

Seattle then recovered an onside kick at the Falcons' 42 and moved in for a touchdown on an eight-yard run by Dan Doornink after Herrera's fake field goal, giving the Seahawks a 21-14 lead at halftime.

After Weaver's unsuccessful fourth-down pass, Atlanta kicker Tim Mazzetti failed on a 25-yard field goal attempt that would have narrowed the lead to seven points.

However, a fumble recovery three plays later set up a 17-yard touchdown pass from Steve Bartkowski to Billy Ryckman that chopped the lead to 24-21.

Seattle, 4-5, added a touchdown in the final two minutes on a 26-yard run by Doornink. Herrera also had a 24-yard field goal in the third quarter.

Atlanta added scores on a 35-yard run by Lynn Cain, a 30-yard fumble return by Rick Byas and a 20-yard pass from Bartkowski to Ryckman with 51 seconds left.

The Falcons recovered their short kickoff and moved to the Seattle 13 but their last hopes died when Brown intercepted a Bartkowski pass in the end zone.

Clipper ace gets call from Cougars

Victoria coach Jack Shupe has acquired John Newberry, the leading scorer in the tier two B.C. Junior Hockey League, from the affiliated Clippers.

Newberry, a 17-year-old Port Alberni product who played the last two seasons in the Racquet Club midgets, has 32 goals and 61 points after 17 games this season.

The two ailing wingers are Randy Zinn, who has a bruised wrist, and Brad Yachimec, who is recovering from a charley-horse. Shupe will likely juggle his lines to accomodate Newberry.

In league action, Lindsay Carson of Billings Bighorns collected nine points last week to jump into fourth spot in the league scoring race.

The nineteen-year-old centre picked up four goals and five assists in three games to move up three notches on the chart.

Centres Doug Morrison and Gord Williams of Lethbridge Broncos continue to hold down first and second spots with 31 and 28 points, respectively. Williams's total includes a league-leading 18 goals, while Stafford leads in assists with 16.

Dionne gets fast start

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings, with 25 points in his first nine games, is off to the fastest scoring start in National Hockey League history.

The best previous start was 24 points in nine games by right winger Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens in the 1975-76 season. Lafleur went on to win the first of three consecutive scoring championships, with 125 points.

Dionne has nine goals and a league-leading 16 assists. His linemates, left winger Charlie Simmer and right winger Dave Taylor, are second and third.

Simmer has 11 goals, tops in the league, and nine assists for 20 points. Taylor has nine goals and nine assists for 18 points. Lafleur is fourth with 10 goals and seven assists for 17 points.

Kelly loses court suspension appeal

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Hockey player John Paul Kelly lost a bid in county court Monday to have his court-ordered suspension from league games shortened.

Judge D.B. Hinds rejected a appeal by Kelly, captain last year of the New Westminster Bruins of the Western Hockey League, which claimed that a conditional discharge on an assault charge handed down in August was hurting him more than it was six other players who pleaded guilty to the same offence.

Kelly and the other players pleaded guilty to common assault after a brawl last March 22 in a game with the Portland Winter Hawks. As punishment, the players were forbidden to play in league games until Dec. 1.

Kelly's lawyer argued that Kelly has in effect received a harsher penalty than his former teammates because he has been drafted to play with Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League and is the only player of the seven considered likely to have a chance in the league this year.

The lawyer, Jerry Pettenuzzo, said the sentence prevented Kelly from earning almost $10,000 playing for the Kings.

Kings' general manager George Maguire said Kelly "played and conducted himself well" during the exhibition season but added that the assault sentence placed him at an extreme disadvantage.

The 19-year-old was selected third by the Kings in the NHL's draft. One other of the Bruins, Boris Fistric, 18, was selected by Detroit Red Wings in the draft but returned to the Bruins as an under-age player.

In their arguments before provincial court Judge J.K. Shaw at the earlier trial, both Pettenuzzo and prosecutor John Bethel said that because the brawl was "a team altercation" no one defendant should suffer a penalty greater than the others.

Judge Shaw accepted the lawyers' argument and gave all seven players the same sentence.

Judge Shaw gave the seven a tongue-lashing for their actions in the brawl and also blamed management for inciting the players to violence. During the trial, Kelly and Fistric admitted assaulting Portland coach Ken Hodge. Two Portland players were beaten.

He ordered the suspensions after declaring a prison term would be too harsh a sentence.

Sinatra asks Kuhn ouster

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainer Frank Sinatra asked for the removal of baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn because of his action in forcing Willie Mays out of baseball because the Hall of Famer has taken a public relations job with an Atlantic City casino.

"Mr. Kuhn told Willie Mays to get out of baseball," Sinatra said Monday in a formal statement released through his public relations firm, Solters £ Roskin, Inc., "I would like to offer the same advice to Mr. Kuhn."

Sinatra, an avid Los Angeles Dodgers fan, said he was joining "the many who are outraged at the decision . . . because Mays acccepted a job with the Park Place Hotel in Atlantic City."

"To suggest that Willie Mays, in accepting a post as a goodwill ambassador for the hotel that happens to have a casino is himself part of a gambling operation, is ludicrous. Then the restaurants in the hotel, the elevators, the bellmen and the doormen, because they are indeed on the premises, are part of gambling for the same logic prevails.

"What he (Willie) has done for baseball is impossible to measure. May I ask what has commissioner Bowie Kuhn done for his game?"

Wilma Rudolph, famous Olympic sprinter who was triple gold medalist in the 1960 Games in Rome, called the commissioner's action "distressing."

"Willie Mays is an inspiration to every youngster," she said. "He has given baseball his life's devotion. I can't understand why such action needs to be taken. You can't be an athlete all your life. Some day you have to turn and walk away."

Rudolph attended the luncheon at which Mays announced his multi-million-dollar contract with the Atlantic City hotel.

Roy White, New York Yankee outfielder who also attended with manager Joe Torre and TV broadcaster Ralph Kiner of the Mets, described Kuhn's action as "unjust."

"A lot of owners own race horses, other athletes, such as Joe Louis and Pancho Gonzales, work at Las Vegas resort hotels," White said. "I think the action is unjustified."

Bowie watching

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn says he will continue his investigation into the Billy Martin case despite the fact that New York Yankees already have fired the controversial manager.

"I'll be interested in how the Yankees plan to handle the situation," Kuhn said in reference to reported rehabilitational plans, in which Yankee owner George Steinbrenner is reported to be taking a personal hand.

Kuhn said he would watch the progress of this "rehabilitation" closely before taking action in the case.

Britain asked to reconsider

TOKYO (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, appealed to British rugby union officials today to think carefully before making sporting contacts with South Africa.

Black African countries have said they will demand Britain's expulsion from the 1980 Olympic Games if the British Lions rugby team goes ahead with a projected tour of South Africa.

Killanin said at a luncheon at the Japan National Press Club in Tokyo the IOC had no control over rugby, which is not an Olympic sport.

But the added: "I would make an appeal to all those responsible to look very carefully at their actions."

Then, in an obvious reference to the African countries, Killanin said: "I hope that all pressure groups which feel concern about this do not make any athletes the victims of the misjudgments and mistakes of others, so that all eligible athletes can compete in the Games at Lake Placid and Moscow next year."

IOC leaders fear a disruption of the Moscow Games similar to that which undermined Montreal in 1976. Twenty-six African countries boycotted the Montreal Games at short notice because a New Zealand rugby team made a tour of South Africa.

Roller skaters bid for Olympic spot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roller skating may be introduced by Los Angeles as a demonstration sport when it hosts the 1984 Olympic Games, Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said Monday.

In an address to the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, he said that speed and figure roller skating events are being considered along with baseball and tennis for the two demonstration sports a host city may introduce at the Games.

Roller skating events were included in the Pan American Games last July in Puerto Rico, marking the first time the sport had appeared in international competitions.

Suns turn on the heat to burst Blazer bubble

By Canadian Press

The bubble has finally burst for Portland Trail Blazers and it was their long-time nemesis, Phoenix Suns, that provided the required heat.

Walter Davis hit an incredible 20-footer in a crowd of Portland defenders at the buzzer Sunday night to give Phoenix an 89-88 victory and hand the Blazers their first National Basketball Association loss of the season after nine consecutive victories.

"This is really a big win for us," said Phoenix coach John MacLeod, whose team has won three straight on the road. "Let me tell you, Portland is a very good team. They really came out and played aggressively in the fourth quarter."

Phoenix had threatened to walk away with the game, scoring the first 10 points of the contest and building up a 15-point lead in the opening minutes of the third quarter.

But Portland's offence, mistake-prone in the early going, began to click in the final period, with Ron Brewer, T. R. Dunn and Maurice Lucas leading a Blazer rally that caught the Suns 81-81 on Dunn's steal and layup with 3:19 remaining.

The Blazers got their first lead of the night, 83-81, on Kermit Washington's rebound basket with 2:07 to go.

Then, as has often been the case between the Blazers and Suns, the last 90 seconds were bedlam. The lead changed hands five times with Lucas's 10-footer with 27 seconds to go giving Portland a 88-87 lead and setting the scene for Davis's heroics.

Elsewhere Sunday night, New Jersey surprised Houston Rockets 120-115, Los Angeles Kings beat Golden State Warriors 97-90, Kansas City Kings defeated San Diego Clippers 106-101 and Seattle SuperSonics downed Chicago Bulls 108-97.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 18 of his game-high 26 points in the secondhalf as Los Angeles won its fourth in a row. Norm Nixon added 18 for the Lakers, while Magic Johnson and Jamaal Wilkes contributed 15 apiece.

Scott Wedman, returning to the Kansas City lineup after missing three games because of illness, scored 17 of his 21 points in the second half Sunday night as the Kings broke a four-game streak with the victory.

Fred Brown came off the bench to hit three straight baskets late in the game after Dennis Johnson fouled out to lead Seattle past Chicago. Seattle guard Gus Williams led all scorers with 26 points, including 10 in the final quarter.

Brothers battle for curling cars

VERNON (CP) — Calgary's George Fink captured the sixth annual carspiel Monday night by edging younger brother Danny of Edmonton 5-4 in the championship game.

Fink became the first skip to win the spiel twice. George won the event in 1975, with Danny throwing third rocks.

Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna, finished third for the second straight year, by defeating Vancouver's Gerry Kent, 6-5 in the consolation final.

Paul Gowsell of Calgary, Bruce Delaney of Ottawa, Edmonton's Matt Baldwin and Len Radcliffe of Kelowna were eliminated in the first playoff round and won $1,500 per rink.

Steve Skillings of Victoria fell before Gowsell 6-4 in quarter-finals of the "C" event. Skillings had defeated Gowsell, a two-time world junior champion, 8-3 in the first round.

Skillings dropped a 5-2 decision to Bruce Delaney of Ottawa earlier Sunday in a "B" event contest.

Terry posts perfect mark

Terry Bateman of Mt. Douglas completed an unbeaten record in the boys' section of the Greater Victoria High School Cross-Country League on Monday by covering a 7,200-metre course in 21 minutes, 56 seconds at Royal Roads Military College.

Bateman won all seven races this season.

Keith Butler of Mt. Doug was second and Ed Smythe of Dunsmuir placed third.

Bonnie Hutton of Spectrum won the 4,000-metre girls' race in 14:38 for her fifth victory this season. Peggy Nelson of Dunsmuir and Karen Coutts of Belmont were second and third, respectively.

Dunsmuir won the boys' team race with 46 points under the reverse-scoring system and was followed in order by Claremont (47), Victoria (95), Belmont (108) and Parkland (145).

Claremont topped the girls' team event with 52 and was followed by Belmont (60) and Victoria (62).

Post, Halldorson collect for second-place efforts

Dan Halldorson of Brandon, Man., and Sandra Post, a former Ontario resident, collected hefty paycheques Sunday for finishing second in professional golf tournaments.

Halldorson partnered Scott Bess of the U.S. to a final-round 10-under-par 62 and a second-place tie in the $250,000 National Team tournament at Disney World in Florida.

Post carded a final-round 72 for the runner-up spot in the $110,000 Far East Women's invitational tourney at Manila, Philippines.

Ben Crenshaw and George Burns, who were six strokes ahead of Halldorson and Bess going into the final round, won the team event and earned $22,500.

Halldorson and Bess finished in a tie with teams of Jeff Hewes and Sammy Recels and Peter Jacobsen and D.A. Weibring. All of the runners-up pocketed $10,500.

Dave Barr of Kelowna and partner Ed Fiori shot a final-round 65 for 264 and $1,700 while Jim Nelford of Burnaby and Pat McGowan fired 68 for 266 and $960 each.

Post collected $10,780 for placing two strokes behind Silvia Bertolaccini of Argentina, who picked up $16,500 for her 54-hole total of 213.

Miller carded a last-round 71 to top 11 other international champions in the 10th annual Lancome Trophy invitational tournament at Saint-Nom-La-Breteche.

Mortgage tax plan snubs 70%: critics

By SHEILA BRADY

OTTAWA (UPC) — Finance Minister John Crosbie urged MPs Monday to pass his mortgage tax credit plan before Christmas, but opposition critics quickly blasted the plan for ignoring 70 per cent of Canadians.

The opposition said the plan, introduced by Crosbie Monday, would benefit only those 30 per cent of Canadians paying off mortgages, and would completely ignore those who rent their housing.

Crosbie said the long-awaited legislation should be passed before Christmas so that home owners and potential buyers can benefit from it in the current tax year. The plan will cost $575 million in the first year and a minimum of $2.3 billion when it is fully implemented in 1982.

NDP housing critic Simon de Jong said the mortgage credits, which will increase to $1,500 for the average homeowner by 1982, would be "entirely wiped out" by interest rates, now at a record 14 per cent.

"I would say this bill is predictable and disappointing because the government didn't listen to any of the criticism (made) when Mr. Crosbie unveiled the details of the program last month," de Jong said.

Crosbie insisted that the plan means 3.8 million homeowners will be better able "to bear the increased costs of mortgage interest, increased costs of looking after a home and increases in property taxes."

Under the plan, eligible homeowners would receive maximum tax credits of $1,250 a year by 1982 and a flat credit of $250 annually on residential property taxes.

In 1979, homeowners will be able to claim 25 per cent of the total credit package — $312.50 in mortgage interest payments and an additional $62.50 in property tax credits.

Crosbie told MPs that despite increased mortgage interest rates, homeowners "will be assisted considerably . . . if we pass the mortgage interest and property tax credit scheme promptly before Christmas so they will get the tax relief they need this year."

Plane fares take off after airlines merge?

TORONTO (CP) — The merger panic that has swept the air transport industry across North America may have devastating effects on the travelling public, the world's largest air transport union says.

Mike Rygus, Canadian vice-president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, told the union's Canadian air transport conference that low air fares will disappear when control of the industry becomes concentrated in a few hands.

Rygus said a stampede of mergers began in the United States after de-regulation was introduced and the U.S. justice department is concerned that it will hurt competition.

A text of Rygus's speech was released prior to delivery.

Six-month spending deficit up

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal spending deficit for the first six months of 1979-80 stands at $7.65 billion, up from $7.02 billion in the same period last year, the finance department reported Monday.

But the department said the spending deficit in September declined to $660 million from $974 million a year earlier because of higher revenues.

Finance Minister John Crosbie has forecast that the deficit for the 1979-80 fiscal year ending Mareh 31 will be $11.3 billion. Last year's deficit was $11.7 billion.

The department said revenues for the first six months of the 1979-80 spending year totalled $16.97 billion while spending was $24.6 billion. In the same period a year earlier, revenues were $15.31 billion and expenditures totalled $22.33 billion.

September revenues were $3.13 billion compared with $2.64 billion a year earlier. Expenditures were $3.8 billion compared with $3.6 billion in September, 1978.

The Clark government has said it plans to hold the line on the $52.6-billion spending ceiling set by the former Liberal government. But to meet it, spending cuts were needed in a number of programs because of higher-than-expected costs for such things as oil import compensation payments for Eastern Canada.

Those payments, used to offset the price of imported oil, are expected to top $1 billion this year, about twice the level forecast early this year. The forecast was made before recent rapid rises in the world price of oil.

Prime Minister Clark said early this month cabinet has decided on a range of significant spending cuts that will be revealed when Finance Minister Crosbie brings down his budget next month.

Shah photos spark storm

EDMONTON (UPC) — The provincial auditor-general has been urged by an opposition party leader to investigate the Alberta Culture ministry because of confusion over its purchase of the Roloff Beny photographic collection.

"I called upon the head of the government to request the auditor-general to investigate the whole matter," said Social Credit leader Bob Clark Monday. "There must be a total breakdown of administration and management of that department."

Culture Minister Mary LeMessurier has been under Opposition attack for more than a week over acquisition of the Alberta-born photographer's collection which includes 82,000 color and black and white transparencies, books, diaries and 80 boxes of prints. Beny now lives in Italy.

Although some of the collection deals with Canadian scenes, much of it is devoted to the exiled shah of Iran, his family and former country.

Clark said earlier Alberta could draw world criticism for purchasing the collection. "There's nothing to be gained by Alberta as being seen as the haven for those people who support the shah," said Clark.

LeMessurier said in the Legislature that Alberta has offered Beny $450,000 for the collecton. Earlier, she said the price was $229,000 and then $399,000. An extra $95,000 would be spent for cataloging, storage, duplication and shipping costs.

"It's totally an example of just wretched administration and pitiful negotiations and a minister who simply doesn't know what's going on in her department," Clark said.

$54.4 million sought for Greater Victoria schools

By AB KENT

Proposals to spend $54.4 million in the Greater Victoria School District in 1980 went before trustees Monday together with a plea for more teachers.

The provisional estimate is $4.88 million higher than this year's $49.5 million budget.

Secretary-treasurer Carl Warner said a 9.86 per cent increase on operations, representing $4.44 million, would be largely due to salaries, fuel and supplies.

He said the salary estimate takes into account an 8.5 per cent provision for teacher salary increases in 1980, based upon union settlements in this area. Teachers and the district are in negotiations but no offers have been made.

The proposal to add 44 teachers to the district would cost about $820,000.

Twelve would be secondary teachers, 10 elementary, 19 teacher-librarians and three special teachers.

Trustee Martin Levin, noting the pupil-teacher ratio will drop to 17.83 with the proposals, asked when requests for more teachers will end.

Assistant superintendent Glenn Wall said not until the desireable 15:1 has been attained.

Superintendent Allan Stables said this year's request brings School District 61 within shouting distance of the other two districts in this area and the provincial average, which was 17.81 pupils per teacher in October of last year.

In general terms, the superintendent said, smaller classes will get better teaching results.

With some classes of 28 or more pupils, efforts must be directed to reducing the teacher load to improve the quality of teaching.

Having taught classes of 50 when he was in the classroom 30 years ago, Stables said children do not get the attention they deserve.

"The classes in the Victoria school district are too large. They are far too large," he said.

"In all sincerity, I really believe that."

Levin said additional teachers represents the largest increase in the budget and added he is not convinced the proposed reduction in class size will have any effect on the quality of teaching.

"I know your dilemma," Stables replied. "Teachers in Victoria are running so hard, with so many large classes, we are not at a level where you can start measuring the difference."

Additions proposed by the administration include a second native Indian home-school co-ordinator, two more speech therapists, a computing studies program for secondary students and a fine arts consultant for drama, art and music.

Cold storage space shortage cost $80,000, farmer claims

ABBOTSFORD(CP) — Farmer Mel Kondolay says he has lost at least $80,000 because of a shortage of cold storage space in the Vancouver area.

Kondolay said he plowed under 50 of the 100 acres he planted in cauliflower and gave away cauliflower from another 30 acres during the weekend. Some of his crop was sold.

Part of the shortage has been blamed on the recession in the United States and bumper crops, but a strike at B.C. Ice and Cold Storage Ltd. has aggravated the situation.

The strike by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union that began 2½ months ago has closed cold storage for about 4.5 million kilograms of vegetables.

The 80 UFAWU workers are seeking an increase of $1.10 an hour on pay categories that currently range from $6.41 an hour to $8.46.

The company offer of an increase of 83 cents an hour was rejected a month ago.

The company said the offer matched an increase accepted two months ago by 4,000 UFAWU shoreworkers, but the union says it discriminated against women in one job classification.

Fish licences dealt like stock

SEATTLE (AP) — Salmon fishing licences off the Alaska coast are being traded like seats on the New York Stock Exchange — with the losers being the fishermen who can't get permits.

The system of limited entry permits issued by Alaska limits the number of fishermen who share in the harvest. The system also drives up prices for the permits.

A year ago, for example, Kodiak fishermen Karl Spielman bought a Bristol Bay salmon license from another fishermen for $30,000. At last week's Fish Expo — a fisheries trade show — here, it was reported that a city shipyard owner had paid $125,000 for a Bristol Bay permit.

The concept also might apply in the future to Washington state, where dwindling salmon runs and fishing rights awards to treaty Indians have combined to sharply reduce fishing seasons.

Part of the reason for the limited entry system in Alaska was to help conserve fish. In a season lasting only a few days, like the Bristol Bay run, fewer boats make work more manageable for biologists.

But Bob Stokes, an economist at the University of Washington Institute of Marine Studies, says the major reason for the permits is to preserve fishermen's incomes.

In the king crab fishery off Alaska, for example, where there is open entry, the number of vessels rose from 56 in 1971 to 225 this year. To protect the resource, the Alaska fish and game department compressed the season to one month.

Stokes said it is grossly inefficient having expensive boats wait most of the year for a month-long season to open. He said it would be more efficient to have fewer boats working longer.

Not all fishermen are convinced.

Jeff Stephan, who negotiates prices for the Kodiak king crab fleet, said in a speech that fish are "a common property of all citizens. I challenge any proponents (of limited entry) to explain why the right to harvest the common resource should be limited to a few."

Oil boycott threatens U.S. over shah

Times News Services

Iranian oil workers have threatened to cut off deliveries to the United States unless the U.S. government extradites the former shah, and Tehran Radio said the ousted monarch's hospital treatment in New York was a trick to get sanctuary.

"We warn that if the Iranian government fails to act in demanding the extradition of the hated shah, or the United States refuses to heed their demand, the bold workers in south Iran will reconsider the export of oil to America and will in fact cut the U.S. oil supply," the Joint Oil Workers Syndicate said in a statement.

Iran ships about 900,000 barrels of oil a day to the United States, representing about 12 per cent of average U.S. consumption.

Doctors say the treatment for the cancer may take as long as a year, and U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance says the long-time ally of the United States will be allowed to remain as long as he needs medical treatment but not for political asylum.

Meanwhile, Iran sold crude oil at $45.30 a barrel in a new spot deal signed two days ago, breaking a record set a few days earlier, the commercial newspaper Bourse said today. The country buying the oil was not specicified.

UN commodity fund pledged OPEC dollars

GENEVA (Reuter) — Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said Monday they will pay contributions on behalf of the world's 30 poorest states to a United Nations fund aimed at stabilizing the prices of 18 raw materials.

The 13-member OPEC said it is willing to pay up to $100 million in order to expedite completion of the fund, which was agreed upon in basic form last March.

Under the fund's proposed terms, resources of $400 million are planned to buy up buffer stocks of commodities to keep prices within agreed margins.

Forced drugs ruled illegal

BOSTON (AP) — Mental patients have the right to reject drugs and seclusion ordered by their doctors, except when the patients present a danger to themselves or others, a federal judge has ruled.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Joseph Tauro, issued Monday in a class-action suit brought by patients at Boston State Hospital, found that those committed to a mental hospital have a constitutional right to a say in their treatment.

But Tauro said the hospital staff can use forced seclusion and medication "where there is a substantial likelihood of extreme violence, personal injury or attempted suicide."

"Although committed mental patients do suffer at least some impairment of their relationship to reality, most are able to appreciate the benefits, risks and discomfort that may reasonably be expected from receiving psychotropic medication," Tauro said.

Tauro's decision came in a suit brought by seven patients at the Boston State Hospital, a state facility for the mentally ill.

OAK BAY

The residents of Oak Bay are united in the desire that Oak Bay continue as a separate municipality with its character and beauty unchanged. Preservation of these things requires continuous, sensitive vigilance.

The essential character of the Municipality is in its single family home. Council must ensure that these homes are not replaced by spot zoned apartments and that the beautiful old houses we have are preserved.

Our parks, trees and gardens are things which make Oak Bay the envy of every visitor. We must continue to safeguard our parks and trees, and furthermore we should extend our walk way system, beautify our Village and improve access to our beaches.

If elected as your Mayor I will adopt such a policy and I will see that it is carried through.

A helicopter lowers an ingenious collecting rake to the tree tops where the healthiest cones grow. They contain seeds that should grow into bigger, better trees to assure forest crops, and jobs, for the next generation.

Dear Landlord:

Over 90% of Canada's forests are owned by the Canadian public—you. In addition to taxes, the forest industry people pay governments for every cubic foot of wood they harvest. And they pay rent for the land they lease. A part of those payments is earmarked for forest regeneration. Is enough being invested to assure future wood supplies? One job in ten in Canada depends on the forest.

Yes, the forests of Canada are still growing more wood than is being used. But the gap is closing. We're closer than we used to be to what foresters call the annual allowable cut.

Further, only half of Canada's natural forests are productive enough for regular harvesting. Some grow in impenetrable country. Some are too far from the mills.

Predictions say the world's appetite for pulp and paper products will double in a generation. If Canada can help to feed that demand, it will mean more jobs, more exports. To grow with demand, Canada must assure continuous forest crops that can be harvested at a reasonable cost. We must also grow bigger crops. That's why forestry programmes are being stepped up all across the country.

A surprising number of Canadians are unaware that they own over 90% of Canada's forest lands and crops. All the wood cut on public land is measured and forest products companies pay for every single cubic foot of wood they use. Besides this, they pay rent for the use of your public land. They also share costs with the provinces to protect your forests from fire, insect, and disease damage. Forest products companies pay taxes; their employees pay taxes. Last year, in wood payments, land rent and taxes, forest industries paid their governments nearly a billion dollars. Their employees paid another billion dollars in taxes.

The care and tending of forests can create jobs for men and women. Some forests need thinning or fertilizing to produce better trees. Harvested areas sometimes need scuffing up to make a good seed bed. Hundreds of millions of seedlings must be planted annually. Each year, around a million acres need this special care to guarantee future crops.

A portion of these funds is set aside to help maintain Canada's great public natural resource. In government forestry departments and in the industry itself, there is growing concern that the investment may not be enough to ensure adequate wood supplies. So attention is turning increasingly to silviculture to produce bigger and better wood crops for the future.

Our forest products bring in more money than any other export, create one out of every ten jobs in Canada.

Quitters live longer on U.I.

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians who quit their job last year collected almost $500 million in Unemployment Insurance Commission benefits, says Paul McCrossan, parliamentary secretary to the federal minister of employment and immigration.

And most of those 225,000 Canadians claimed benefits for longer periods than people who were laid off, said McCrossan, member of Parliament for the Toronto riding of York-Scarborough.

McCrossan said in a speech Monday that his conclusions were the result of a four-month study of the causes of high unemployment rates that will be released during parliamentary committee hearings.

"After the benefits run out there appears to be a very high success rate in finding work."

McCrossan said the study suggests that although these recipients are not fraudulently taking benefits, they are choosing to stop working and live off UIC benefits from time to time.

He said the federal government is considering a method of making up the cash difference to people who take jobs that pay less than unemmployment insurance benefits.

The method will be discussed at a federal-provincial conference next month, McCrossan said. The government has said it will announce changes in the program in January.

He said the rate of voluntary quitting increases as the economy gets better, and young people are faster to quit their jobs in parts of the country where the unemployment rate is low.

"I do not have an adequate explanation for this phenomenon, but it could be that in areas where jobs are more readily available, individuals are willing to trade off their time against the drop in income, knowing when they need it the work is there."

Embassy decision draws Israeli ire

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark has pleased Arab nations and disappointed Israel by abandoning his election pledge to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem.

Clark told the House of Commons Monday he had accepted the recommendation of ambassador-at-large Robert Stanfield that there be no transfer of the embassy until Israel and its Arab neighbors agree on the status of the disputed city.

Israeli Ambassador Yeshayahu Anug termed the decision a "disappointment," but a spokesman for the Israeli foreign ministry today accused Canada of bowing to pressure from extremist Arabs.

"The position of Arabs who reject the peace process should not interfere with the independent considerations of Canada, which did so much in the past and we are sure will continue in the future, to contribute to the Middle East peace process," the spokesman said.

In Ottawa, spokesman for the Arab League said that Clark had made a "courageous" decision to correct a mistake and called for recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"It is not now our policy," Clark said of the embassy proposal first announced to Jewish leaders in Toronto during last spring's election campaign. "We do not intend to move the embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

"If there is a just and lasting peace settlement that settles and clarifies the question of Jerusalem, that may allow us to reopen the question," he said. "But until there is such a clarification within the context of a just and lasting settlement, the Canadian embassy will stay in Tel Aviv."

Ottawa recently acknowledged lost contracts worth $4.5 million but the potential trade that could be affected by a total Arab boycott was about $600 million in Canadian exports and $1.5 billion in imports, mainly oil. Contracts worth billions of dollars also could have been jeopardized.

The leaders of the opposition parties agreed with Clark's new position but severely criticized the "irresponsible" election promise that precipitated the dispute.

"It was an incredibly bad decision . . . that anyone, it seems to me, that thought very seriously about it for more than three minutes would not have reached," NDP leader Ed Broadbent told reporters.

"He has now reversed himself and one hopes that we can go back re-establishing not only good relations, particularly with the Arab states but one must also . . . repair some feelings that no doubt have now been jeopardized between the state of Israel and the government of Canada."

PRIME MINISTER Joe Clark and Joseph Luns, secretary-general of NATO, leave Clark's office in Ottawa Monday after discussing NATO issues. Luns was in Ottawa for the annual meeting of NATO parliamentarians last week and stayed on to talk to government officials.

Telesat seeks lease cost cut

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian satellite agency, Telesat, has filed an application with the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission for permission to cut its satellite channel-leasing costs to broadcasters.

It costs about $2,160,000 a year to lease a channel and because of that high cost many channels are unused.

By DANIEL DROLET

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Senator Louis Giguere was given a one-quarter interest in a holding company in return for the use of his political influence in getting government contracts for an advertising firm that company controlled, a witness at the senator's trial testified Monday.

Leon Simard, a former official with the Canadian Advertising Agency Ltd. and its holding company, Publicor Ltd., told Mr. Justice Jean-Marc Labrosse of the Ontario Supreme Court that he and two other businessmen agreed to take personal responsibility for the companies when they took a 25 per-cent interest in Publicor in 1965.

Giguere, he said, was also given a 25-per-cent interest in Publicor but was not required to sign for a $100,000 overdraft the company owed, or otherwise commit himself financially.

"Giguere's role was to bring, through his connections and contacts, work from the federal government in the advertising field," Simard told the court.

The senator and the two Quebec businessmen, David Belhumeur and Jean Dionne, are charged with conspiring to have Giguere accept an $87,000 benefit "in consideration for co-operation, assistance and the exercise of influence" in obtaining government ad contracts.

Simard's name appears on the indictment, which covers a nine-year period from Jan. 1, 1965, to Dec. 31, 1973, but he is not charged.

He was the first witness called by Crown prosecutor Rod McLeod when the trial opened Monday.

Giguere, a federal Liberal party organizer in Quebec, was a director of the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. until he was appointed to the Senate in 1968 by former prime minister Pierre Trudeau.

Crown lawyers say they have 40 witnesses to call, and expect the trial, the first bilingual one in the Ontario Supreme Court, to last three to six weeks.

Suit launched over Canadian fighter deal

OTTAWA (CP) — Northrop Corp. has launched a court action against McDonnell Douglas Corp. involving Canada's $2.3-billion fighter plane competition.

But McDonnell Douglas stated here Monday the lawsuit will have no effect on the American firm's offer to the Canadian government to build 130 to 150 fighters for the armed forces.

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon (PC — Victoria) said the government will "look into it very carefully" before signing any contract with McDonnell Douglas, which is one of two finalists in the competition. General Dynamics, another American company, is the other contender.

A Northrop spokesman said in a telephone interview from Detroit that his company has filed an injunction in a Los Angeles federal court to stop McDonnell Douglas from unilaterally offering some Northrop business for the Canadian contract.

Northrop, McDonnell Douglas' main subcontractor in building the P-18A fighter, readily agreed to offer Canadian industry some of the business Northrop would have got from the Canadian contract, he said.

But the Northrop spokesman said McDonnell Douglas went further and included some Northrop business from the U.S. navy and marine corps contracts and any other foreign contracts the F-18A may get.

Northrop told McDonnell Douglas this would be a breach of the contract between the two companies, he said.

Guerrillas reject election truce

LONDON (UPI) — Guerrilla leaders today rejected a British call to lay down arms during elections in Zimbawe Rhodesia, expressing doubt that government security forces will protect them.

"There are two sides to this war, and there are two forces in it," said Joshua Nkomo, co-leader of the Patriotic Front. "Both forces must be used."

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, the conference chairman, defended his proposal to use only "existing forces," ignoring Patriotic Front forces.

"When we stop shooting we will start electioneering," Carrington said. "You will have to accept that under the British administration the police will work fairly. We will see that they do."

For seven weeks the Lancaster House conference on bringing Zimbabwe Rhodesia to legal independence has skirted the security issue.

"We are being asked," Patriotic Front spokesman Edison Zvobgo said, "when we've been fighting the police and army and air force, to deliver ourselves to Salisbury and expect that, at the end of the campaign, we would still be around.

"What will happen is that we will be dead.

"We are not willing to trust our fate to an unknown individual who does not know the situation on the basis of somebody's word alone. All we ask is that both parties be present."

Nkomo conducted what a conference spokesman called "A kind of catechism," questioning Carrington on the guerrilla war in the African country.

Nkomo and co-leader Robert Mugabe rejected his assurances that the country's existing police and security forces could be impartial and effective.

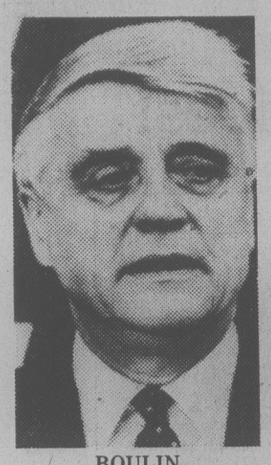
"You appeal to us to trust a governor on the basis of your word alone, in the presence of the entire Rhodesian army and police forces," Mugabe said.

"No, we cannot trust on this basis. We can only trust on checks and balances."

Carrington admitted Britain's proposals "were welcome to neither side," but pleaded with the front leaders: "If the governor's responsibility is not respected, it will not be possible to reach a settlement. The whole thing will break down.

"Either side can bust it," Carrington said. "Without the trust of both sides, it will not work."

French official takes own life



BOULIN

PARIS (AP) — Labor Minister Robert Boulin, whose family said he was depressed over accusations he was involved in a Riviera real estate scandal, was found dead today, an apparent suicide, French officials said.

Boulin was found in a shallow pool near his car in the Rambouillet Forest southwest of Paris with an empty bottle of barbiturates nearby, officials said.

His family said Boulin appeared depressed and forgetful following publication last week of an expose about the alleged scandal.

5,000 flee Cambodia

BANGKOK (Reuter) — About 5,000 Cambodians crossed into southeastern Thailand Monday apparently fleeing from increased fighting across the border, a spokesman for the Thai Supreme Command said today.

They took refuge in the border village of Ban Laem, about 300 kilometres southeast of Bangkok, opposite areas controlled by Khmer Rouge forces loyal to ousted Cambodian premier Pol Pot.

The spokesman said a report from Ban Laem indicated that fighting between Vietnamese-led forces of the Phnom Penh administration and the Khmer Rouge was going on around the western Cambodian gem-mining town of Pailin, about 16 kms from the border.

Thai authorities were unsure how long the group of 5,000 will stay in Thai territory. They may return across the border if the fighting dies down, the spokesman said.

Military sources at Ban Laem recently estimated there are about 14,000 Pol Pot guerrillas facing the Vietnamese-led side across the border from the two southeastern Thai provinces of Chantaburi and Trat.

A delegation sent by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees had talks with Premier Kriangsak Chomanan and other senior Thai officials Monday on the vast numbers of people arriving from Cambodia, UN officials said.

Jimmy Carter's pastor, Dr. Charles Trentham, has been fired by the congregation of Washington's First Baptist Church for dating the daughter of the bible class teacher, church officials said today. Officials said the congregation voted 166-140 to accept the recommendation of the deacons that Trentham's contract not be renewed. Trentham, 60, had been dating the 28-year-old daughter of Sunday School teacher Fred Gregg. Gregg's daughter was separated from her husband but not divorced. Trentham has been divorced twice.

Anne Murray will play hostess to another Anne Nov. 14 — Britain's Princess Anne, at a Save the Children Dinner in Toronto.

A trip to the dentist Diane Schweitzer made in New York to Luglio Giacomo was a real pain. She had a toothache and went because her dentist was away. Giacomo took one look and told her she needed $2,200 worth of work — including the capping of several teeth. A week later, with $1,000 already paid and her mouth so sore she couldn't close it, her regular dentist came back and proclaimed Giacomo's work "a mess." Giacomo had all the equipment, but he isn't a dentist. He's in line for up to seven years in jail now for his fraudelent fixup.

In Rome, Viris Vecchi kept his bowl of tobacco burning for two hours, 51 minutes and 22 seconds to set a world pipe smoking record in the fourth annual world pipe smoking championships. The previous record was set two years ago by a Japanese contestant.

Little Eddie Smith clutched his doll with sympathetic understanding as the two left Children's Hospital in Oakland, Calif., where Eddie's legs were amputated after complications from chicken pox. A child psychologist who had prepared the two-year-old patient for the surgery had removed the doll's legs and replaced them with bandaging similar to Eddie's. The boy suffered a rare blood-clotting complication of the common childhood disease and underwent surgery four times to treat the problem before gangrene forced the amputation. "It's been a long ordeal, but we got him back," Eddie's mother, Linda, said as they left for home in Manteca. "They said he wasn't supposed to live. "I believe he understands that he doesn't have any legs," said Mrs. Smith, 23. "And I also think he accepts it. We knew if we accepted it, he would."

Dear Abby:

Seven years ago I wrote you a letter, signed Born Again. You printed it. I just want you to know that I have stayed within 10 pounds of my ideal weight, which is saying a lot when you consider how much I had to lose.

Perhaps if you ran my letter again it would help others the way it helped me. I enclose a copy in case you can't find the original.

Friend for Life

Dear Friend:

Yours was one of the most rewarding letters I have ever received, and I rerun it with pleasure:

Dear Abby:

I send this letter out of gratitude for recommending Overeaters Anonymous. It saved my life.

Two years ago I weighed 326 pounds. If high blood pressure or heart trouble didn't kill me, I'd have done it myself.

I was a heroin addict and a 23-year-old divorced mother of three on welfare. I hated myself enough to prostitute my boy to get money for dope. I suffered humiliation after humiliation. (A 300-pound prostitute gets all the sadists and perverts no other hooker will take.) I had no self-respect, no hope, no God — no nothing.

I wrote to you, never expecting an answer. Your letter was the first word of encouragement I had had in years. I took your advice and went to an OA meeting 18 months ago. I believed none of it. 'These people are crazy,' I thought, 'I'm a fat, ugly junkie, and they're telling me I can get thin and regain my self-respect if I want to!'

'No way,' I told them. Nobody threw me out. A beautiful, middle-aged man put his arm around my shoulder and said, 'Come back and listen. Try us for 30 days. What can you lose?'

Today I've lost 121 pounds and I'm still losing. I'm drug-free, and I'm learning to like myself. I have a good job, a belief in a power greater than myself, and the love and respect of my children and people who believed in me when I didn't believe in myself.

There is no scale in OA. They don't shame you if you backslide. They are a group of loving, caring, supportive people who are there to help you because they have been helped themselves.

After sinking so low, OA gave me a chance to be what I've always wanted to be — a lady.

How can I thank you for sending me there?

Born Again

Dear Born Again:

Don't thank me. I merely threw you a lifeline. You caught it. And for you readers seeking a similar opportunity, OA meets at 8 p.m. Mondays in the Cedar Hill Community Centre, 3220 Cedar Hill Road in Saanich, and Thursdays at 8 p.m. in Spectrum School on Burnside Road.

Further information on OA in Region 1 — which includes Vancouver Island — is available through Audrey at 658-5467.

Staid Victoria is dressing up

Linda Jensen wearing outfit she made

By AL FORREST

Victoria is becoming style-conscious in a big way, says the new Miss Victoria, Linda Jensen, who makes her own clothes.

"The casual look seemed to dominant here but now more and more people are dressing up," she said.

The 21-year-old restaurant hostess made the comments in an interview before heading for the Miss Canada pageant in Toronto, an event she called "the answer to my dreams."

For her talent segment in the competition, she plans to model her own clothes.

"I have made a large number of suits and dresses — even three-piece suits for men."

A ladies suit takes three days to make and the cost of materials is usually between $20 and $25. The suits sell in the range of $100, significantly below the equivalent price in stores.

Linda was considering a career as dressmaker but now many other opportunities are opening up.

"As a child I used to watch the Miss Canada pageant on television and I dreamt about how wonderful it would be to be in it. I think every girl dreams about that. And now my dream has come true."

Going to the pageant will enable her to test out another dream, that maybe she could become a model or work in some related field.

The exposure of being on national television and meeting people in the modelling field would be an invaluable experience and could be a turning point in her life.

Clothes will be an important factor because she does not rate herself as a singer and she is hoping the judges will let her display her skills as a dressmaker for the talent segment of the contest.

For her interview she was wearing a dark green skirted suit coming just below the knees.

"I think this is the most effective style for working ladies. A skirt is a little more impressive than pants. A skirt shows off the legs and is a good-looking style."

The below-knee length will probably be around for awhile, she says.

"I don't expect any dramatic change in styles for some time. We are just getting into this look."

Vancouver has been more of a dress-up town than Victoria in recent years, she said, but now the capital city is catching up.

When she dines out she wants an elegant look, although the dress should be simple, not cluttered. Sleeves are short or the arms are bare.

For that disco night the best look is flimsy, she said. Most disco dresses are sleeveless and involve as little material as possible.

But the punk rock look has captured the fancy of a sizeable minority of the disco crowd and people arrive in leopardskin tights or garbage bag creations.

For business, the skirted suit is still best for ladies and the three-piece suit for men.

Since her selection as Miss Victoria, she has been receiving an endless array of roses, cards and telegrams.

"It is all so exciting. I couldn't believe it when they called my name. I heard my name and I hesitated and then I thought: My gosh, that's me! I've won! It was a wonderful moment."

Ideal stress level personal variable

By ENID NEMY
New York Times

—Stress is not killing women, but it may be killing "the unmeasurable parts, particularly their spirit."

—Women who place their whole emotional investment in relationships with men may find themselves left without the social support they need.

—Women's rights to make their own choices, and be trusted in their commitments and competence, may be contingent on men's investment in the maintenance of their own dominance.

—The major stress-producing impact that women experience in the courts is in the marital sphere.

These were among the theses advanced over the weekend at a two-day seminar on the "Dynamics of Stress: Women and Other People," held at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University.

Dr. Kenneth Greenspan, addressing some 250 men and women in attendance, said that stress, and distress, might be compared to a violin string.

"Each of us has to find for ourselves a tautness, an amount of tension appropriate for us," he said. Dr. Greenspan is the founder and director of the college's Laboratory and Center for Stress-Related Disorders, which, along with the Department of Psychiatry and the New York State Psychiatric Institute, sponsored the seminar.

Dr. Anke Ehrhardt, who is on the faculty at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and a research scientist for the New York State Psychiatric Institute, speaking on biological cycles in women, said that during childhood boys generally had more behaviorial problems and were more vulnerable, but that during adolescence there was a shift.

"From the second decade on, the rates of depression are higher for women," she said. "This period brings on many stress factors that stay with some the rest of their lives."

Ehrhardt asserted that despite the belief that the menstrual cycle affected women's moods, objective data indicated that for most women, mood changes as a result of the menstrual period were mild and did not detract from their functioning in any way.

She advanced the theory that the stereotyping of sex differences and women's pattern of "learned helplessness" were major stress factors.

"Social discrimination has reduced women's options, especially for women actively involved in child rearing and homemaking," Ehrhardt said.

Married women have higher depression rates than single, divorced or widowed women, she said, and suggested that a major reason might be the low prestige attached to being a housewife.

"Being married seems to have a detrimental effect for some women and a protective effect for men," Ehrhardt said. "The homemaker's role is particularly stressful to women if it is the only role. Several studies show that working married women cope better with stress."

Stress is also an ultimate result of neglecting to cultivate women friends, she said. This, she added, has also been described as "relational deficit."

"Those women who place their whole emotional investment in relationships with men find themselves left without the necessary social supports," she said.

Dr. Helen Kaplan, speaking on the effects of stress on sexual functioning, that "sexual response is profoundly influenced by stress, and anxiety."

"A person under overwhelming stress becomes totally asexual," she said. Even a lesser amount of stress can affect some part of sexual functioning, Dr. Kaplan said.

"A female under stress is more likely to lose her sexual desire, and often has problems having orgasms," said Dr. Kaplan, director of the Human Sexuality Program at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. "In males, the excitement phase suffers most."

She suggested that many younger, newly liberated women were suffering increasing stress because they had "unrealistic ideals." They have not been taught that they cannot be perfect in all their roles, Dr. Kaplan said.

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I've had two attacks of dizziness in a year. They last for a few weeks, then go away. When I have them I am totally incapacitated. When I am better I live in dread that an attack will come again. I was told that this might be Meniere's disease and that only an operation can cure it. I am frightened and confused. Just what is Meniere's disease?

Mrs. B.R.

Dear Mrs. R.: When you say that your condition "might be" Meniere's disease, it is obvious that the diagnosis has not been clearly established. There is no guesswork about Meniere's disease. There are many tests by which the diagnosis can be made.

Unfortunately, many cases of dizziness are automatically thrown under the umbrella classification of Meniere's disease, when in reality it does not exist.

Finding the cause of transient attacks of dizziness requires persistent effort by both patient and physican. The center of balance, or equilibrium, lies deep within the inner ear. Three tiny semi-circular canals contain fluid that shifts with every change of position of the head. Delicate hair cells in this area, known as the labyrinth, pick up the flow of the fluid and relay messages to the brain. The brain then makes an adjustment of body position to keep one in balance.

Even though the center of balance lies in the middle ear, it does not mean that when dizziness is present there is necessarily disease, inflammation or infection of the inner ear.

The balance mechanism can be upset by high or low blood pressure, drugs, allergy, excessive intake of fluid and salt, eye disorders, arteriosclerosis, excess tobacco, alcohol, coffee and tea. All kinds of motion in an automobile, a ship or a plane can affect the delicate balance mechanism. And this is only a partial list of the factors that may be responsible for your transient episodes of dizziness. One by one, each of these factors can be carefully studied and eliminated. Pursue this with your doctor to see what your case involves.

Dear Doctor:

Is it fair for someone who is not trained in medicine or psychiatry to interpret dreams? One of our friends does this.

Dear Miss J.:

The interpretation of dreams is not a parlor game. The special meanings of dreams can be interpreted only by those who are trained in the art and science of psychology and psychiatry. Any other person who attempts to interpret dreams must rely on myths, superstitions and old wives' tales.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I have two very special friends, both 16. We always do things together but from time to time we all forget and exclude one from the group. I try to be fair because I like them both and I don't feel right unless they are both along.

The other day I found they'd been together on a Saturday night and hand't invited me. When I got home I felt very hurt and cried a lot. I felt as if my friends had abandoned me.

Are they trying to tell me, "Get lost, we don't need you?" This isn't the first time. Please give me some advice and tell me how you would handle the situation if you were in my shoes.

Answer: First of all, I don't think it's "stupid," or that you are over-reacting. Nobody likes being the odd man out. If this was an isolated occurence, I would say that not only is it to be expected from time to time, it also is healthy for the three of you to change the " combinations" from time to time. But you mention at the end of your letter, that this is not the first time. The second? Third? Or are we talking about a relatively frequent occurence?

As with many other things, I recommend getting to the heart of the matter by speaking to the people who are bothering you. Often there is a good reason for misunderstandings. At least, there would be a reduction in wondering and the feeling of "not knowing." Just be prepared for the possibility that you may not hear exactly what you are expecting.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I was at a party recently and got drunk. It was only the second time I had done this and my Mom got overly upset. I 've always had good grades in school and try my best because I want my parents to be proud of me. But now that they've caught me drunk, they tell me not to get any funny ideas about quitting school and say they think I'll get myself pregnant. I have friends who are boys but they just are friends — I'm a virgin and having sex is as far from my mind as quitting school is. How do you deal with overly strict parents who think you're a slut? (I've been called this by my Mom before.)

Answer I would suggest that you try and understand your parents' point of view, which will help you to be patient with them until you can change their opinion of you. Being drunk is not the most dignified thing to be, and I can imagine that your parents were quite shocked to discover you in this condition. They may also feel some guilt and responsibility that they have failed because you became drunk. To change their opinions and regain their trust, you will have to take responsibility for your behavior and stop doing those things that will jeopardize their good opinion of you. You may also find that by so doing, your own feelings of self -respect increase as well.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am a 13-year-old girl and have just gotten my period this month. I have a question I would like you to answer. Is it normal for a girl to have her period twice in the same month, and, if it is not normal, could something bad happen to me? Could you please answer this question because I am very scared of what might happen.

Answer: Many girls experience irregular cycles during the first few months following the onset of their menses or periods. This irregularity varies from periods a week or two apart to periods several months apart. Most girls who have irregular periods will become regular after a few momnths or a year and there's nothing for you to worry about. No harm can happen to you unless you continue to have very frequent periods, which are also heavy, leading to a drop in your hemoglobin or the amount of iron in your blood. The symptoms of this anaemia are tiredness and paleness, which won't show up if you have only one or two heavy periods. If it continues, you should arrange to see the doctor, who may prescribe some extra iron to make up for the blood loss.

I would advise you to talk to your mother. She may have had the same thing happen when she was young. Menstruation is a normal function and discussing it with your mother should be a natural thing to do. It is quite common for menstrual periods to be irregular at certain times.

Nostalgia for mini hits U.K.

LONDON (LAT) — Here in the motherland of the mini, where the first great skirt uprising started in 1963, short skirts are back on the streets. Some streets. And minis are on the fashion docket for spring. Some dockets.

The revival of short skirts is all part of a great 1960s revival and an even greater Mod revival, complete with exaggerated eye makeup, geometric haircuts, op-art vinyl raincoats, brightly colored jackets, heavy crepe-soled shoes, porkpie hats with tall crowns, olive drab parkas and flight suits from World War II and a lot of the happy, plastic-coated polka-dotted madness of '60s memory.

Zandra Rhodes, who is the only main designer here to include a ini in her spring lineup, calls the movement post-punk and sees it as a new directioin for the 1980s.

According to Rhodes, "There are '60s overtones — short, pencil skirts, tight sweaters, little plastic handbags and plastic earrings — but the extreme makeup and the beehive hairdos in bright colors make them look more futuristic."

The hangout for the neo-Mods and the postpunkers is a nightclub called Blitz, where every Tuesday is '60s night and the getups range from boys wearing makeup and big pompadours to girls in tight, short dresses with high heels.

Daytime headquarters for the neo-Mods is King's Road, where the 17- to 25-year-olds rush to buy their satin minis at places such as Liberated Lady, and the Mod men buy their tight-fitting pink and blue gingham suits with matching shirts and polka-dot ties at Johnson's. And both buy their 2-inch thick, crepe-soled shoes at Robot, where owner David Fortune characterizes the Mod spirit as more positive than the anti-everything punkers.

"These kids are yearning for the '60s when everyone was filled with optimism, anything seemed possible and nearly everything was tried," says Fortune.

But this latest round of mini-tack is just that with most of London's designers, who see thigh-high skirts as leftovers from the past, not the stuff from which the '80s will be made.

"I've always hated fashion hanging on a skirt length," says Jean Muir, "and I believe the mini is utterly and totally unattractive. I don't think women want it, and I don't think they will let it be forced upon them."

Buying a house is probably the biggest investment that a person will make in his lifetime. Chances are that the person will have to sacrifice a few things along the way in order to afford his house.

If the person does decide that a home is for him, going to a real estate broker should be his first move. However, since a broker is essentially working for the seller of the house, the prospective buyer would be well-advised to seek the counsel of a lawyer before closing any deal. The lawyer will be able to see whether or not the buyer's interests are protected within the terms of the proposed contract.

"Seams are trendy now," said Cheryl Hayes, marketing manager for Burlington Canada, which reports sales of its seamed hose have soared 200 to 300 per cent in the last year.

All this talk of trendiness and sensuality gives a few chuckles to women who remember when seams were an unavoidable result of the knitting process.

"In the movies, that pose to straighten your seams was sexy," said Mary Stephenson, executive director of the Fashion Designers' Association of Canada. "To the rest of us it was a necessity."

She said she spent her entire courting days being told her seams were crooked.

Although there is some controversy among retailers, most agree that pantyhose with seams are even harder to keep straight than stockings.

Ms. Hayes said the best effect is achieved by wearing stockings with a garter above the back seam. The garter holds the seam straight to some extent.

Crooked or not, seams are back.

"Seamed hose are a relatively inexpensive way of updating your look this year," said Jeanne Grierson, public relations director for Creeds, a high-fashion store in Toronto.

"They're part of the 1940s fashion picture and a product of the interest in the leg this year."

TORONTO (CP) — A $624,000 riding school for the disabled is to open soon in G. Ross Lord Park. Karel van der Heyden, financial chairman os the Community Association for Riding for the Disabled, says all that remains is work on an indoor riding arena. The facility will be known as the Variety Village Equestrian Centre for Handicapped Children.

Denim put on display

The blue denim cut was admitted to the nation's holiest of cultural institutions, the 1873 Nordiska Museum, when Inga Wintzel, of the textile section, opened an exhibition titled simply "Jeans."

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Anderson was pulled over Sept. 7 by Colwood RCMP for a traffic violation on Goldstream Avenue. Anderson could not produce his driver's licence but was given a traffic ticket and allowed to proceed.

Five minutes later, the officer received information Anderson was under suspension and stopped Anderson again, this time on the Old Island Highway.

Laughton said Anderson was suspended by the MVB on July 31 for penalty points accumulation and failure to pay the $25 assessment.

Anderson said he had received an interim licence from the branch and was under the impression he was not under suspension because he had told his girlfriend to pay it when he received the notice of suspension in the mail.

After learning that Anderson could have got his driving privileges back the day after the suspension was imposed, merely by paying the $25, Allan called the system a "tax-collecting scheme."

An 18-year-old who was charged with three counts of driving under suspension during a 15-day period gave Allan a chance to warn those driving with court-order suspensions or banned because of a poor driving record of impending jail sentences.

He pleaded guilty to driving while disqualified Sept. 9 in Saanich, Sept. 12 in Shawnigan Lake and Sept. 23 in Victoria and had been fined $200 for the same thing July 27 of this year.

On Sept. 9, a citizen's complaint resulted in Saanich police stopping Belmonte in the Town and Country shopping centre parking lot.

Three days later, Belmonte was caught speeding while heading south on the Island Highway near Shawnigan Lake.

Laughton said Belmonte had racked up 45 penalty points prior to the three charges to which he pleaded guilty Monday afternoon. With the convictions, Laughton added, Belmonte received 30 more penalty points.

Defence lawyer James Main said his client had only a Grade 7 education because of dyslexia and other major learning disabilities.

He said Belmonte's only successes in life was his ability to work on cars and drive them.

Allan called the action a flagrant ignorance of the law and warned others who are in the same position that they can expect jail unless there are extraordinary circumstances.

He gave out two sentences of 15 days and one of 30 days, each to be served consecutive to each other.

Jerry Wayne Kitchen, 21, of 506 Pendray, and James Edward Flangen, 23, of 1017 Denman, were jointly charged with a Friday break-in at the James Bay elementary school at 140 Oswego.

Victoria police, alerted by an activated alarm, spotted two persons inside. They arrested them outside, one following a short chase.

Judge Blake Allan denied bail to Kitchen but released Flangen on $500 recognizance. He remanded both until next Monday for election of their trial method.

Court was told the incident began at about 2:15 a.m. when Bhangu Kuldip Singh, the 30-year-old owner-driver of a C & C taxi, picked up six youths, including a female, at 6187 Hunt.

Singh tried to tell the group he couldn't take six but two sat in the front and the other four in the back seat and ordered Singh to take them to Doncaster elementary school, 1525 Rowan.

While in the cab, Kittle said, they broke the interior light, spilled beer, grabbed the radio microphone from Singh when he tried to radio for assistance, and ripped out the meter wires.

In front of 1185 Reynolds, the youths got out and someone broke the windshield with beer bottles, broke the radio antenna, and kicked the side of the cab. One youth getting out of the front flung the door so hard he buckled the right front fender, Kittle added.

Ostler, who placed each on six months probation, warned the youths that if they had had a criminal record for similar offences, they would have been looking at jail terms.

Prette pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine and Crown counsel Elke Kluge said Prette was checked at about 7:10 p.m. Friday in the 3500-block Beach by Oak Bay police.

Duty legal aid lawyer John Hills said Prette had been tree planting in Prince George for five months and had planned to start a six-month European trip on Wednesday. Hills described Prette as a forthright, honest, hard-working, and responsible young man and not a leech on society.

Prette explained that he was not involved in the drug scene and didn't know anything about cocaine.

Before imposing a fine, Allan said he was considering a jail sentence before Hills spoke up and suggested the courts are far too lenient in drug-related cases.

Oak Bay to vote on park dedication

Oak Bay ratepayers, already faced with choosing six persons for the seven-member council in the Nov. 17 municipal election, will have another ballot — asking if they support dedication of six parks inadvertently left off a ballot several years ago.

Council gave initial approval to the referendum Monday night and will give final approval in time for the matter to be submitted to ratepayers for the ultimate decision.

Ald. Shirley Dowell told council it was thought that all parks over one acre had been dedicated in the earlier referendum but some were missed because of staff sickness and turnover.

The undedicated parks are Anderson Hill, 6.3 acres; Carnarvon, 9.8 acres; Mary Tod Island, five acres; Walbran, 4.9 acres; Willows, 2.9 acres and Windsor, 10.7 acres.

The only question mark is Anderson Hill, in south Oak Bay, where the provincial government owns a fraction of two lots and the municipality is still trying to obtain permission for dedication.

Parks under one acre can be dedicated by bylaw without a referendum and this has been done. Dedication for parks over one acre is required by the Municipal Act.

Mayor Brian Smith made the observation in the wake of neighborhood complaints that expansion of a house at 2830 Somass Drive has reduced the ocean view of nearby houses.

Smith told upset neighbors that council has no legislative power to control design.

An exception, he said, is the Uplands, where council does have design control but only because the Uplands is governed by special provincial legislation.

He noted, however, that the owner of 2830 Somass Drive, Niall MacNaughton, did build a basement suite illegally, without obtaining a building permit.

Building inspector J.H. Elsdon, in a memo to council, said he had checked the house expansion plans and can find no cause for taking further action. He had investigated the alleged illegal suite and said MacNaughton told him he had decided to legalize further work.

Elsdon said "we have had a very stormy relationship with Mr. MacNaughton and intend to enforce the bylaws to the letter."

After listening to neighbors, Ald. Peter Bunn said it was a case of lack of understanding and "jackboot treatment of the neighbors" by MacNaughton.

Architect Pamela Charlesworth, called in by MacNaughton after the first plans by someone else had been carried out, said she had never before seen such animosity.

She said MacNaughton preferred not to attend the meeting because the high feelings might preclude rational discussion but she hoped that with the neighbors the problem can be solved.

MacNaughton sent a letter saying he was sorry the house expansion upset neighbors but it was necessary because of a growing family.

Legion branch up for tax sale

The city has obtained a B.C. Supreme Court order forcing the sale of the old Britannia branch of the Royal Canadian Legion at Blanshard and Cormorant to pay for $10,315.20 in 1978 taxes owed by the owner, Garden City Developments Ltd.

It recently won a judgment for the taxes in the same court. The sheriff was ordered by Judge C.R. Lander to hold a public auction to sell the property and building, which has been vacant for some time.

The latest assessed value of the parcel is $465,550.

Lung specialist to talk at Y

Kilshaw, a specialist in chest dieases, will discuss chronic bronchitis, asthma, emphysema, and will leave time for questions from the audience.

The lecture starts at 8 p.m. and is open to the public free of charge.

It is the second in a series of six informational health lectures jointly sponsored by the Victoria Medical Society and the YM-YWCA.

Mayor on board of Norfolk House

Victoria Mayor Mike Young and five other parents have been elected to the board of governors of Norfolk House private school.

The mayor will serve the unexpired year remaining in the term of John Davis, who resigned after two years.

Those elected for regular three-year terms are developer Gerry Williams, banker Jack Murray, librarian Susanna Miyake, Joan Dale and Kate Bray.

Top marks in finance

John S. Gill of Investors Syndicate Ltd. in Victoria earned the top mark of 87 per cent in an examination following a national course on insurance, taxation and finance.

Opening lead — five of hearts.

Let's imagine you're declarer in a given hand and that if you adopt a certain line of play there is a 68 per cent chance of success. And let's assume that if you adopt a different line of play your chances rise to 73 per cent. It follows, of course, that you will do better in the long run if you take the line of play that offers the greater chance of success.

That is pretty much the situation in the accompanying deal after you win West's heart lead with the ten. It is tempting to tackle the diamonds at once by playing first the king and then the ace, hoping to find the suit divided 3-2. But if you did that in the actual case, you would go down one, assuming correct defense.

Now let's say you're the type of player who worries from the start that the diamonds may be divided 4-1 instead of 3-2. In that event, you take steps to try to overcome the imagined 4-1 division, and you do this by playing a low spade to dummy's king at trick two, followed by a low diamond towards your K-9.

After East plays low, you finesse the nine! You don't expect to win the trick, but you're nevertheless confident that nothing whatever can stop you from making at least nine tricks. As it happens, your nine of diamonds loses to West's ten, but he can do nothing at all to keep you from making four no-trump.

It turns out that your safety play in diamonds was exactly the right medicine to bring you safely into the harbor. It might have turned out to be futile (if East had held the J-10-x-x of diamonds and put up the ten), or it might have cost you a trick if the diamonds proved to be divided 3-2, but it was nevertheless the right way to play the hand.

Britain blocks fishing treaty

LUXEMBOURG (Reuter) — Britain has blocked a European Common Market fishing agreement with Canada, a decision which West German officials say could affect next month's Common Market meeting.

British fisheries Minister Peter Walker told reporters Britain will ratify the 1979 Canada pact only as part of an overall fisheries policy which the Common Market still is seeking.

West German officials said this would damage their country's fishing industry, which has some trawlers operating off the Canadian coast.

"This could definitely affect the atmosphere in Dublin where the Common Market meeting will take place, one West German official said. "Britain must know that we will not tolerate this."

Dutch sources said the Netherlands also will be less sympathetic now to British demands for a reduction in its contributions to the Common Market budget.

Irish Fisheries Minister Brian Lenihan, who chaired Monday's meeting of Common Market fisheries ministers, said he expects an agreement on a new fisheries policy within 12 months. Walker said this will happen sometime during 1980.

Japan heads resign

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese cabinet resigned today with the governing Liberal Democratic party still undecided on who should succeed Premier Masayoshi Ohira.

The resignation set the scene for an 18-day parliamentary session starting later today that will nominate a new premier.

The Liberal Democratic party, with 258 of the 511 seats in the lower House of Representatives, will form the government.

Ohira has admitted responsibility for the Liberal Democratic party's setbacks in the election, although he says he should not have to give up the reins of power.

IRA taps British code?

BELFAST (Reuter) — Guerrillas of the Provisional Irish Republican Army today said they are intercepting the British Army's secret coded messages in Northern Ireland by using a new Japanese computer imported from the United States.

A British Army spokesman refused to comment on their claims. "We cannot discuss military signal methods," he said. "They are top secret."

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

If soil is ready sow onions now

Towards the end of September a seed bed was prepared for sowing next year's onions, in a sheltered warm spot which will catch winter and early spring sunwarmth.

There are several reasons for this small job being done well in advance of the seed sowing date. One is that onions need a deep friable soil that is well drained over winter and fair amount of residual summer warmth for good seed germination in late October to early November.

In September the soil is dry and easily worked to a good depth and the quantity of humus needed is readily available from the bottom of the spring-built heap.

Although some heat is lost in preparing the soil, late September and early October usually replaces most of the losses before the rainy season starts. This year has been good for replacing the needed warmth.

This week the seed is sown. Most home gardeners have a variety of onion they have grown successfully, or prefer for texture and flavor.

New gardeners are often bewildered by the number of varieties listed in seed catalogues, while others have the idea that any packet marked Onions will be suitable for growing here.

There are extra early, early, maincrop and late varieties listed. Choice depends on the location of the garden and its average spring and early summer temperatures, and the type of soil.

Tight firm bulbs are the ones for storage. A variety which has given good satisfaction since its introduction is Autumn Spice, bred for northern districts, lowland soils, and long days with but a short period of summer heat.

The prepared seed bed which is about one-foot square, now has its surface loosened and allowed to dry a little in wind or sun.

The seed is sown thickly in the centre of the prepared space, this thick sowing being contrary to normal sowing instructions but necessary to success with onions.

Thick sowing is done to prevent the seedlings from developing a small bulb at the base before being transplanted to the open rows in the vegetable garden during March or early April.

The seedlings around the outer edge of the sowing will produce these small bulbs and when transplanted, run to seed before a storage bulb is produced. Any seedlings with this bulb formed are transplanted to a separate row and used as green onions before the seed stems appear.

The next sowing date for onions will be indoors in February, or in a greenhouse.

For that sowing, four-inch clay pots are used, the seed again being sown thickly in the middle of the pots.

The seedlings will be about six inches high by late March under indoor conditions and ready for transplanting to the open rows.

Problems in ripening onion bulbs in July are usually due to sowing the seed in open rows at a time when strong seedlings should be transplanted. Autumn Spice, for example, needs 92 days (three months) from transplanting to maturity, making the end of April the latest date to transplant for maturing and after-ripening for good storage.

Yearly cost for garbage up $22.50

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The city's new garbage collection system will cost the average home owner $22.50 a year extra, Victoria's public works committee was told today.

The full cost of the new setup, made necessary by the quashing of the city's existing garbage bylaw, will be $62.50 a year, but property taxes will be lowered by about $40 a year when the new garbage utility is established early in the new year.

City engineer John Sansom told the committee that there will be no changes in the present method of garbage collection, but the inreased cost is to cover garbage pickup at apartment buildings, which formerly paid for private collection.

Sansom and Ald. Ron McKenzie also raised the possibility of going to curbside refuse collection, estimating it would save the city about $500,000 a year. McKenzie said he and Sansom went to Kamloops last month and that city's one-man curbside collection works very well.

"The system is working in Kamloops, and it could be paralleled here," said McKenzie. But it would mean laying off about 20 men and the purchase of new garbage trucks, Sansom said.

The committee was told that previous surveys in Victoria have found that residents are evenly split over switching to curbside collection. Now garbage cans are picked up at the rear of residents' houses.

Ald. John Hayes said that curbside collection would create problems for some of the city's elderly residents.

Ald. Bill McElroy and Mayor Mike Young asked the engineer about the possibility of charging lower rates for homeowners who have only one garbage can a week, or who recycle much of their garbage, but Sansom said this would create a more complicated administrative setup.

"What we're trying to do is simplify it as much as possible," said Sansom.

Final approval of the new utility awaits the drafting of a new bylaw which is expected to come before the new council early in the New Year.

Study fails to halt N-plants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Jimmy Carter's Three Mile Island Commission today presented him with a final report that informed sources said contained no recommendation for a moratorium on new atomic plant construction.

Instead of a moratorium — which might have doomed the ailing nuclear industry — the report recommended that approval of disaster response plans be made a requirement for construction or licensing of any new atomic reactor.

But the commission, which held long and often bitter hearings on the March 28 accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., recommended sweeping changes in the organization of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and extensive reforms in the industry it regulates.

The president received his copy of the final report at a brief White House ceremony, but it was not immediately made public.

One of the key regulatory reforms was a recommendation for periodic relicensing of atomic plants on the basis of hearings, inspections and performance criteria, a commissioner said.

It made a series of recommendations to enhanced training for reactor operators in keeping with a commission finding that "NRC standards allowed a shallow level of operator training."

Another recommendation, acknowledging that reactor accidents are likely to happen despite the tightest safety precautions, called for regional storage of radiation drugs like potassium iodide to make them accessible to citizens contaminated by fallout.

Congressional oversight panels have deferred crucial decisions on the future of peacetime atomic power until the commission's report is evaluated. The report also has stirred intense interest in Japan and Europe, where nuclear power is seen as a vital alternative to imported oil and coal.

Booze scars on fetus?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say they have the first solid evidence indicating that birth defects in children of alcoholic mothers are caused by direct action of alcohol on developing fetal cells.

Experiments with rat embryos grown in alcohol solutions outside the mothers' bodies show that alcohol can be responsible for some of the symptoms of fetal alcohol syndrome, says a study.

It has been unclear whether the deformities associated with chronic alcohol use are caused by chemical products of alcohol broken down in the mother's body, the poor nutrition of alcoholic women or other factors.

The new study, conducted by scientists at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences and George Washington University, shows that pure alcohol, ethanol, interferes with both cell division and growth in early embryos.

"Our studies have shown that in embryos cultured in the presence of ethanol, both differentiation (cell division) and growth were retarded as a function of dosage . . . ," the scientists reported in Science magazine.

"To our knowledge, this is the first unequivocal demonstration of a direct action of ethanol on the developing mammalian embryo, without the confounding factors of altered maternal function, nutrition or metabolism."

Three doctors — Nigel Brown, Eugenia Goulding and Sergio Fabro — said the research suggests that deformities in humans may result, at least in part, from reduced cell growth early in a fetus' development.

At this stage, which occurs in the first month of human gestation, tissues separate to form the beginnings of organs and the nerve and circulatory systems.

Fabro has said that the worse cases of fetal alcohol syndrome in humans consist of central nervous system problems, growth deficiencies, low birth weight and a cluster of facial deformities.

Oak Bay home, 5 city firms overnight burglery targets

A $150 coin collection was taken from the home of Mrs. Joan Dale, 19 King George Terrace. Entry was made by forcing a basement window.

Oak Bay police said the burglary occurred while Mrs. Dale was absent between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Similar tactics were used across the street at Frank L. Bott & Co., 1812 Cook, and a nearby shop. Other entries were at Ingledew's (Victoria), 749 Yates, and Sawyer Sewing Centres, 840 Fort.

Soviet stars defect in Bern

BERN (AP) — The Swiss government announced today that it has granted political asylum to two former Olympic skating champions from the Soviet Union and an 18-year-old ranking tennis player from Czechoslovakia.

Oleg Protopopov and Ludmila Belousova, the Soviet skaters who won four world and two Olympic titles, defected during an exhibition tour of Western Europe last month. They were granted asylum unusually quickly.

Five prominent Soviet stars, including the skating stars, defected to the West in little more than a month earlier this year. Three dancers of the Bolshoi Ballet defected to the United States while on tour there. Last week, a Soviet journalist defected in Tokyo.

The 47-year-old Protopopov and his 44-year-old wife, who married in 1957, dominated pair skating through most of the 1960s, twice winning Olympic gold medals and picking up world titles for four straight years starting in 1965.

The Protopopovs rose to world fame at the Olympic Games in Insbruck, Austria, in 1964 when they won the gold medal. They duplicated the feat in Grenoble, France, four years later.

The couple last appeared in international competition at the 1969 world championships in Colorado Springs, Colo., finishing third. They turned professional early in the 1970s, skating with a troupe based in Leningrad, their hometown.

The petite blonde and her slim partner, favorites in the Soviet Union, vanished the day they were to take a plane home after a four-week tour of West Germany and Switzerland.

A few days later, the justice ministry disclosed the couple had asked for political asylum. Their exact whereabouts in Switzerland are still unknown, and their lawyer said today they would not be available for comment.

Miss Strachonova, who is living in Zurich, called the Swiss government's decision "absolutely wonderful" and said she hoped to start playing abroad soon. She was formerly Czechoslovakia's No. 4 player.

Others who defected from the Soviet Union in recent months were Alexander Godunov, one of the Bolshoi's top dancers, and Leonid and Valentina Kozlov, principals with the company.

San Salvador leftists free 276 hostages

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Leftists holed up in two government buildings released 276 hostages they had held for five days after police and soldiers fired into a leftist street demonstration in this Salvadorean capital.

The Red Cross said at least 24 persons were killed and dozens more were wounded Monday in the new government's first use of force against leftists demanding an end to military dominance of El Salvador, Central America's smallest and most densely populated country.

About 1,000 members of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc were still holding three cabinet members, eight other officials and a Chilean official of the Organization of American States in the labor and economy ministry buildings, which they took over last Wednesday.

The army surrounded the two government buildings and several downtown churches the leftists were occupying, but there was no apparent attempt to dislodge those inside.

Police and soldiers in armored vehicles opened fire on about 150 masked demonstrators marching toward the office of La Prensa Grafica, one of two newspapers bombed by leftists on Sunday. Marchers said the demonstration was a warning to the media "to quit being used by the military."

Hua lunches with Queen

LONDON (Reuter) — Chinese leader Hua Guofeng had a hectic series of meetings today with British political leaders and top businessmen.

Later, Hua, on the third leg of a Western European tour, was invited to lunch with the Queen at Buckingham Palace — one of the highlights of his six days in Britain.

U.S. gov't re-opens Hanford N-dump

SEATTLE (AP) — Low-level radioactive wastes will once again be shipped to the Hanford nuclear reservation for disposal as the federal government has decided to start using its own dump.

Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray closed the commercial burial site for low-level nuclear waste on Oct. 3. A commercial dump has also been closed in Nevada.

However, the federal government has decided to handle its own waste at federal burial sites located in Nevada, Idaho, New Mexico and South Carolina as well as in Washington.

Records indicate that since the commercial site opened at Hanford, in southeastern Washington State, in 1965, only 2 percent of the wastes there have come from government sources.

Dave Jackson, the energy department's public information officer in Las Vegas, Nev., said the department "anticipates that this action will help make room in the commercial sites in dealing with medical research and industrial low-level wastes."

He said the new policy "will remain in effect until there is adequate space at commercial sites."

Ray closed the commeral site at Hanford after three defective shipments were discovered. That left only one commercial burying ground available, in Barnwell, S.C., and officials there recently limited the amount and type of waste it will accept.

Meanwhile, at Bangor, Wash., dozens of anti-Trident demonstrators who scrambled over a barbed wire fence Monday at the nuclear submarine base have a more sedate appointment today — before a United States magistrate.

Base authorities said that by late Monday afternoon, 88 protesters had been taken into custody — not counting one man who climbed 16 metres up a tree and commenced yodelling and bird-calling shortly after he got onto the base in the morning.

He remained in the tree in the afternoon while his protester companions were photographed and given citations.

The protesters taken into custody by civilian security guards were driven by yellow Navy buses two blocks to a base gymnasium.

There they were ordered to appear in federal court in Seattle today on charges of entering a naval base without the commanding officer's permission, a regulation adopted last last June 6, said Petty Officer Cecilia Bond, another base public information officer.

Begin shuffle

After Begin reached agreement with his coalition partners on limited changes, officials said he would act as foreign minister himself for the time being.

Dayan resigned because of disagreements over the handling of talks on autonomy for the Palestinians in occupied Arab territories and Begin failed to persuade other ministers to take over the job.

Earlier Begin denied that he also might resign because of a cabinet crisis over the state of the Israeli economy and the future of a Jewish settlement which the Supreme Court has ordered the government to remove from Arab land.

Violent child deaths soaring

Self-destructive tendencies have resulted in an alarming increase in violence-related deaths among B.C. children, a major study released Monday shows.

The report by Vancouver pediatrician Dr. Roger Tonkin says that while children have unprecedented good health, more are dying by suicide, homicide and accident.

"Violence in childhood in B.C. has been escalating at an alarming rate, and we have the dubious distinction of having one of the highest violence-related mortality rates in the world," says the report.

The study confirms a situation Victoria medical people have been dealing with for some time, Greater Victoria General Hospital director of patient counselling Keith Anderson said today.

Anderson said the hospital's pediatric and child abuse services are dealing with increasing numbers of children in potentially destructive home situations.

Anderson said less and less value is being placed on childrens rights and needs in Victoria and across the province.

"I am aware of individual cases where children are victimized by adults and our culture and in some cases the media," he said, adding that growing numbers of young single mothers with no family support, and the breakup of the nuclear family are major reasons for the increasing problem.

"The study struck a responsive chord in me. I don't have lots of statistics to indicate what direction we (society) are going in with children, but I see it every day in my kind of work."

In his study Tonkin found that violence accounted for 55 per cent of deaths for children between the ages of one and 14 and 87 per cent of the deaths in the 15-to-19 age group. The majority occurred outside the hospital — many in the home or family car.

Obesity is increasing, children are not physically fit, more are dropping out of school, the pregnancy rate among teenagers is unacceptably high and there has been a tremendous increase in motor vehicle accidents involving juveniles.

"Children and young people may be the perpetrators of violence, but usually they are the victims," Tonkin says.

In the last decade, the suicide rate increased 59 per cent for children under 15 and 236 per cent for those aged 15 to 19.

Deaths by motor vehicle accidents increased an average 15 per cent for children and teenagers. The human resources ministry reported five B.C. children died of physical abuse last year.

Tonkin says the figures reflect only the tip of the iceberg. For every successful suicide it is estimated there are between 50 and 100 attempts.

For every child who dies of physical abuse, there are between 300 and 400 reports of

Pay up or freeze Lougheed tells oil consumers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed delivered a tough message to oil consumers Monday, telling them bluntly that his government will unilaterally set a price on oil this winter if a pricing agreement cannot be reached.

"Within Alberta, people will pay the world price for oil fairly soon and if other Canadians want to pay the price, they can have some too," he told reporters.

If Alberta does not get the price it wants, he said, the taps would be turned off.

Lougheed's remarks to a Vancouver Board of Trade meeting and to reporters later brought a swift reaction from critics in his own province and elsewhere.

In Ottawa today, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn tried to brush off Lougheed's threat by saying each premier must take his position.

Despite a condemnation of the Alberta stance by the Ontario government, Hnatyshyn denied the provinces are squabbling.

"That's not my interpretation of it. These are statements made by the provincial premiers."

Prime Minister Clark has refused to comment on Lougheed's speech.

The Alberta premier, who has been involved in difficult oil price talks with the other provinces and the federal government this year, said his government will set a price for consumers in his province.

If consumers outside Alberta want to buy oil at that price, they can, he added. Otherwise they can go elsewhere.

At present, Canadian oil — the vast majority of it from Alberta — sells domestically at $13.75 a barrel, compared

By CAROL GOAR

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, concluded eight hours of testimony before the commons finance committee Monday evening, expressing optimism than interest rates will soon start falling.

Acknowledging that current high interest rates are imposing considerable hardship on the 'little guy' — the small businessman, farmer or homebuyer — the governor held out the hope that the peak may have been reached.

"When we've reached peak interest rates before, they haven't lasted very long," Bouey said.

He refused to be specific about when rates might begin to fall or how quickly they will tumble.

"I can't tell you how deep the valley is or how promising the promised land on the other side will be," he told New Democrat Simon DeJong (Regina East).

But Bouey did remind MPs that the last time interest rates reached a peak — in July 23, 1974, when the bank rate stood at 9.25 per cent — it took only four months before the bank was able to start reducing its lending rate.

The governor was questioned by 31 MPs from all four parties in his two-day hearing.

Although the grilling at times became intense, the 59-year-old Saskatchewan banker remained cool throughout, answering even the most hostile questions calmly and thoughtfully.

Many MPs, most of them members of the Conservative government, appealed to the governor to think of the suffering his high-interest-rate policy means for their constituents.

"I want the committee to know we at the bank are concerned about the social consequences of our policy," Bouey said. "If we knew of a better alternative within our power, we would use it."

The governor never wavered from his position that high interest rates are necessary both to attract foreign investment into the country and to make loans sufficiently expensive that consumers think twice about credit-buying.

Earlier, Conservative MPs struggled bravely to stand behind their party's high-interest-rate policy, but many confessed it is becoming difficult to face their constituents.

Only two members of the government — veteran MPs Pat Nowlan of Nova Scotia and Alvin Hamilton of Saskatchewan — attacked their party outright before the Commons finance committee. But almost every Conservative who spoke at the three-hour hearing said he had been inundated with complaints and tales of hardship from voters.

Crombie bows on lost pensions

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister David Crombie agreed today to seek another $5 million from cabinet so elderly widows and widowers would be reinstated with pension benefits lost six months after their spouses died.

The minister bowed to pressure from both government and opposition MPs during a Commons health committee meeting. Members said they would support the bill if its provisions were extended to cover an estimated 5,000 elderly persons widowed for more than six months.

Currently the bill will allow elderly widows and widowers to continue receiving the spouse's pension benefits until the survivor becomes eligible for old age benefits. The bill applies to spouses of pensioners who died during the six months before the passage.

The spouse's allowance of up to $301 is paid to pensioner's spouses between 60 and 65. It now terminates six months after the pensioner dies.

The bill also ensures continuation of pensions and allowances if the partner receiving the allowance is sentenced to prison for more than 90 days.

Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats criticized the bill, saying they would not support such legislation unless it were extended to at least cover persons widowed for more than six months.

Stanley Knowles, New Democrat House leader, said the bill could be quickly approved in committee and returned to the Commons for third reading if Crombie added a provision reinstating pension benefits to elderly recipients widowed more than six months.

Earlier Crombie told committee members he is seriously considering amending the legislation so recipients cut off from the pension benefits could be reinstated.

But costs would increase to $10 million from the current $4.3 million.

However, the minister finally agreed to seek cabinet approval for the extra funds in return for support of the bill.

MONTREAL (CP) — With a .38-calibre pistol as her withdrawal slip, a woman described by police as "a sweet young thing" has staged seven successful holdups at downtown banks in the last two weeks.

Investigators say they have no idea who she is and they insist she hasn't hauled off that much.

"But she knows her stuff," one Montreal detective said, "or at least she's learning fast."

During one hold-up she was handed a "bandit pack", a device which explodes automatically to cover the thief with dye, but it failed to go off.

She was handed another pack during a later job, but she swiftly shoved it back into the teller's hands.

She has also shown a preference to working solo, except for one job when she was accompanied by a male accomplice.

But the guy blew it. As they were making their getaway, he ran straight into a nearby traffic police officer who immediately arrested him and brought him in for questioning.

"He didn't tell us a thing," moaned the detective.

U.K. 'marriage' door slamming for Asians

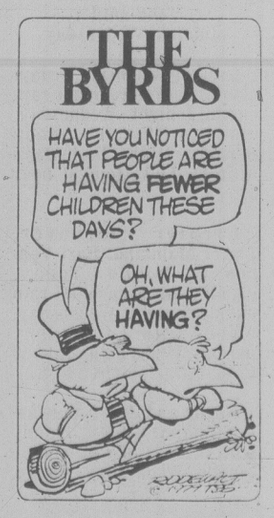
LONDON (AP) - In a bid to curb the number of non-whites coming into Britain, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government plans to bar the husbands and fiances of Asian immigrant women from settling here, Home Secretary William Whitelaw said.

Conservatives and right-wing groups, who have sought a crackdown on non-white immigration, said that many of the marriages are arranged for convenience in defiance of immigration quotas.

Whitelaw told a meeting of Conservative MPs Monday night that a new package of regulations to be introduced next month will considerably reduce the number of Asian men now granted entry into Britain.

However, Whitelaw stressed that the new rules only will apply to women born abroad. British-born non-white women will be able to bring into the country husbands or fiances.

An estimated 40,000 non-whites were allowed to settle in Britain last year, a slight drop over previous years. Most were from Pakistan, India and Bangladesh.



Fired 'hero' has town up in arms

McBRIDE, B.C. (CP) — Furious McBride residents are set to battle the RCMP bureaucracy in Ottawa over the firing of the town's 'folk hero'.

After more than 14 years with the force, Constable Al Thiel got the boot last week for refusing to transfer to Williams Lake, a town in the Central Interior, from this community near the Alberta border.

The 600-member community has launched a banner-and-button campaign to back their man. Many residents are angry at RCMP officials who, not known to take kindly to people who question internal activities, informed them that it is a routine transfer. Orders are orders.

Thiel says his long-time Mountie dream and career is over. He is selling his farm because he cannot pay the mortgage. His wife and two children, seven and nine, are "angry and upset," he said.

Thiel is planning to ask the courts for the chance to give his side at an internal hearing.

Local residents, including farmers, ranchers and loggers, have rallied to his support, saying he is the best policeman they have had in a dozen years.

A city official says vandalism and robberies have plummetted since Thiel arrived two years ago.

"He is an exceptional police officer. He has won the respect of even the toughest McBride delinquent."

Don Reed, organizer of the rally behind Thiel, says there is more to the story than meets the eye. The RCMP is uncomfortable with Thiel's grass-roots type of policing, he said.

Thiel parades the streets after hours and talks to juveniles and suspected petty thieves as well as respected community members.

RCMP Superintendent John Bentham in Ottawa said he needs time to review the case before commenting.

Reed says a recent change in the RCMP policy regarding appeals may work to Thiel's advantage in the courts. Lawyers say chances for an appeal are good.

Guerrillas reject election truce

LONDON (UPI) — Guerrilla leaders today rejected a British call to lay down arms during elections in Zimbawe Rhodesia, expressing doubt that government security forces will protect them.

"There are two sides to this war, and there are two forces in it," said Joshua Nkomo, co-leader of the Patriotic Front. "Both forces must be used."

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, the conference chairman, defended his proposal to use only "existing forces," ignoring Patriotic Front forces.

"When we stop shooting we will start electioneering," Carrington said. "You will have to accept that under the British administration the police will work fairly. We will see that they do."

For seven weeks the Lancaster House conference on bringing Zimbabwe Rhodesia to legal independence has skirted the security issue.

"We are being asked," Patriotic Front spokesman Edison Zvobgo said, "when we've been fighting the police and army and air force, to deliver ourselves to Salisbury and expect that, at the end of the campaign, we would still be around.

"What will happen is that we will be dead.

"We are not willing to trust our fate to an unknown individual who does not know the situation on the basis of somebody's word alone. All we ask is that both parties be present."

Nkomo conducted what a conference spokesman called "A kind of catechism," questioning Carrington on the guerrilla war in the African country.

Nkomo and co-leader Robert Mugabe rejected his assurances that the country's existing police and security forces could be impartial and effective.

"You appeal to us to trust a governor on the basis of your word alone, in the presence of the entire Rhodesian army and police forces," Mugabe said.

"No, we cannot trust on this basis. We can only trust on checks and balances."

Carrington admitted Britain's proposals "were welcome to neither side," but pleaded with the front leaders: "If the governor's responsibility is not respected, it will not be possible to reach a settlement. The whole thing will break down.

BOULIN

PARIS (AP) — Labor Minister Robert Boulin, whose family said he was depressed over accusations he was involved in a Riviera real estate scandal, was found dead today, an apparent suicide, French officials said.

Boulin was found in a shallow pool near his car in the Rambouillet Forest southwest of Paris with an empty bottle of barbiturates nearby, officials said.

5,000 flee Cambodia

BANGKOK (Reuter) — About 5,000 Cambodians crossed into southeastern Thailand Monday apparently fleeing from increased fighting across the border, a spokesman for the Thai Supreme Command said today.

They took refuge in the border village of Ban Laem, about 300 kilometres southeast of Bangkok, opposite areas controlled by Khmer Rouge forces loyal to ousted Cambodian premier Pol Pot.

The spokesman said a report from Ban Laem indicated that fighting between Vietnamese-led forces of the Phnom Penh administration and the Khmer Rouge was going on around the western Cambodian gem-mining town of Pailin, about 16 kms from the border.

Thai authorities were unsure how long the group of 5,000 will stay in Thai territory. They may return across the border if the fighting dies down, the spokesman said.

Military sources at Ban Laem recently estimated there are about 14,000 Pol Pot guerrillas facing the Vietnamese-led side across the border from the two southeastern Thai provinces of Chantaburi and Trat.

A delegation sent by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees had talks with Premier Kriangsak Chomanan and other senior Thai officials Monday on the vast numbers of people arriving from Cambodia, UN officials said.
